Comedy Role For Norma Talmadge

Norma Talmadge, in the title role of "Kiki" showing next week at the Capitol Theatre reveals herself in a new light—that of a comedienne. She is supported by noted players including Ronald Colman, Gertrude Astor, Marc MacDermot, Geo. K. Arthur, Mack Swain, Erwin Conely, Frankie Darro and William Orlamond.

Luck played a great part in the life of Kiki, a Paris street gamine, but she had to fight for what she got. Battling against odds, the waif did not hesitate to resort to all sorts of tricks in her efforts to overcome poverty and reach the estate of a "great lady."

Love was a stranger until she met Victor Renal, manager of a Paris theatre. The girl lost her job in the chorus of Renal's theatrical troupe, but he, smitten with her charms, took her to his home. How Kiki foiled her rival, Paulette, a stage star, and nipped a conspiracy between Paulette and Baron Rapp to kill Renal's love for her, forms a delightful and exciting story.

Don't miss the opportunity of seeing "The Johnstown Flood," at the Capitol Theatre this week. It is a thrilling film adaption of the greatest disaster in history, with a story woven around the flood that will keep the patrons of the theatre thrilled. The all-star cast is headed by George O'Brien, with Florence Gilbert playing opposite him. Others in the cast are Janet Gaynor, Paul Panzer, Georgie Harris, Walter Perry and Sid Jordan.
