Sir Wilfred Laurier opened the Toronto Industrial Exhibition on Tuesday.

Corn is attaining a wonderful growth this season and stretched up greatly since the recent rains. There are many heavy crops in this section but Mr. Thos. Ludfords is the highest we have observed. A stalk pulled at random measured 12 feet 6 inches.

A sample of Russian barley is at the Liberal office grown on Mr. Comisky's farm, 2nd con. of Markham, formerly known as Reunic's Silver Medal Farm. The grain is plump, and that the yield was good may be judged from the fact that Mr. John Wice threshed for the proprietor 1,300 bushels in ten hours. The barley averaged 45 bushels to the acre. With the exception of Wild Goose wheat Mr. Comisky's other grains were equally good, his oats, timothy and clover being particularly heavy.

"Sweepstaker" Smiles Thru

Some fellow with a brilliant idea to put over once wrote something about a man being worth while who can smile when something in particular and everything in general seems to have just gone wrong. It was a great thought. Made quite a hit at the time and still holds good.

Take Hoot Gibson for example. When it comes to smiles Hoot is there with a capital S. When things are going dead wrong, whether it be in real life or reel life Hoot just smiles. "A Smile," Hoot says "can carry one through the toughest situations" and he ought to know for he has smiled his way through the hard life of a cowpuncher, then as a cowboy with a wandering circus outfit and now he is doing it in the movies.

Hoot owes much of his success to a smile—the Gibson smile. It is one of those infectious sort of smiles that just grips one whether he is smiling from the screen or smiling at one person. The famous smile is there with all its winning power in "The Arizona Sweepstakes," a Universal-Jewel now being shown at the Capitol theatre. Through it Hoot smiles his way in and right out of many tight holes. "The Arizona Sweepstakes" is a gripping story of the adventures of an Arizona cowboy who first gets mixed up in the gang warfare of a large city and later finds himself forced to do battle with a millionaire rancher from the east. The cowboy escapes the dangers of the city and arrives home in time to ride in the Arizona sweepstakes, upon the result of which the father of the girl he loves has staked his all. Opposing him in the race is the villain from the east and a dozen or more cowboys.

The race itself is the big scene of the picture. It is daring of horses and men, the course leading along mountain trails over ditches, fences, fallen trees, and boulders. Spills and narrow escapes are frequent and the race allows Hoot the opportunity of again giving an exhibition of his wonderful horsemanship.

The Business of Agriculture

FARMING is more than an occupation; it is a highly commercialized business which requires careful planning and thoughtful execution. Bountiful production is necessary but much effort is wasted unless the business of disposing of the year's output is properly managed. In conducting the business of the farm the Standard Bank can play a prominent and useful part. Consult the manager and learn how true co-operation between banking and agriculture builds a more prosperous community.

ELECTORS OF NORTH YORK

Loyal and True

How's That, Umpire?

There is a right manly ring in the pamphlet "My Position in the Field" which Mr. Harry Sifton has issued to the electorate. Without side-tracking or camouflage he comes straight to the point.

"I repudiate any suggestion of disloyalty which has been cast upon myself or the Liberal party... The Conservative party considers that it has the monopoly on Canadian patriotism—To what are the Tories loyal? No one can say."

Unfortunately one can make a good guess. With a beating of big drums and martial ostentation of chest Mr. Meighen delivered the celebrated "Ready, aye ready" oration. Then at Hamilton he contended that, in the event of a British war, the people of Canada would require to be consulted by means of a General Election. Who was responsible for this change of key? Was it Mr. Patenaude?

Mr. Meighen may be as loyal as he chooses toward a personal friend in Quebec, but that is not the kind of thing which the average Britisher means when he talks about "loyalty."

From the British angle, "loyalty" involves three things:—

- (1) The common medium of speech,—the English language.
- (2) The Imperial badge,—the Union Jack.
- (3) The people's charter, the British Constitution.

As to the first of these, the Tories are making no exclusive "corner." To be accurate, the English language is not being treated with conspicuous loyalty when employed for perpetual slander and mud-slinging. Some respect is surely due to the "mother" tongue.

Nor can the Tories stake a proprietary claim upon the Union Jack, which for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze. In one of the public schools of Ontario at the last federal election, when the children were playing their game of mock voting, the rallying cry of the little Conservatives was,—"Down with the Union Jack!" Although the matter was reported to the Mayor of the town, no action was taken. His Worship was a Conservative. Were these children merely quoting something which they had overheard from their betters?

Upon the Third count of loyalty, present-day Conservatism makes an equally prejudiced showing. In 1849 the Tory mob "rotten-egged our Governor-General and burned down our Canadian Parliament Buildings because Lord Elgin persisted in acting in accordance with British Constitutional practice."

In 1926 the descendants of the same "Tory mob" salute and eulogize a Governor-General who made a serious blunder in his reading of British Constitutional practice. Loyalty to the British Constitution,—rotten-eggs and blazes! Disregard of the British Constitution,—"For he's a jolly good fellow!" Call that cricket? Call that "playing the game?"

NO, NO! That stuff cannot be "shot" with impunity across a Canadian audience. As Mr. Sifton writes, "We do know, however, that Liberal loyalty is to Canada and the Empire," and its motto is—"freedom for all, privilege for none; government of the people by the people, for the people."
