Wife Has No Legal Right To Pledge Husband's Credit

"Keeping Up With The Jones" A Problem of Our Home Life.

Miss Grace Hunter, B. A. and Bachelor of Law was the speaker at the first educational meeting arranged between the Home and School Club and the Women's Institute for the winter season. The meeting took place in the High School Gymnasium on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock and the subject of the address was—"To what extent may a wife pledge her husband's credit"—and it also covered the legal status of the married woman and the deserted mother. Miss Hunter in explaining the law on these subjects made some trenchant remarks on the extravagance of many modern wives, on their unduly high standards in "keeping up with the Joneses" on the tyranny of fashion which drives many light headed women to unreasonable expenditures and on the painful position in which the husbands of such women find themselves when they are faced with the alternative of paying huge bills or of forcefully restraining their wives at home by assuming complete control of the purse strings, or of taking these inconsiderate ladies to court.

"We hear a lot about the wife who has no economic independence," said the speaker, "but to be quite frank my sympathy goes out to the many fine husbands with extravagant wives who are placed in this embarrassing position. Budgeting in any household should be the result of conference between husband and wife. There should be an understanding as to income and expenditures. Lawyers say that in their experience the average married man is usually quite willing to provide adequately for his wife and household and it is to be remembered in this connection that today when standards are so high and young wives demand so much this means a tremendous responsibility. The married man needs to have courage in whatever walk of life he may be. For the extravagant wife does no conferring. She just spends. Yet wives have no right under the law to pledge their husband's credit at all. The husband is required by law to support his wife and that is interpreted as meaning, providing the necessities according to their status. But it is just here that much of the trouble comes in because when a teamster's wife takes it into her head to live and dress like a fashionable lady, and a fashionable lady makes up her mind that she must live like a princess both husbands are to be equally pitied because eventually they are likely to land in the courts to settle the subsequent financial difficulties.

Then today we have women who are trying to be both single and married women. They want careers outside the home and careers inside. They want support from their husband and complete control of all they themselves earn and this too very often leads to disaster. I was surprised at the conference of University women at Amsterdam this year to find this point of view put forward as reasonable. It is unreasonable. The Married Women's Property Act marked a revolution when it was passed. It is one of the finest flowers of civilization that a man is compelled by law to support his wife and if women now by their unreasonable demands cause damage to this Act by taking an unfair advantage of its provisions they will have only themselves to blame if the legal status of the wife is finally jeopardized."

Dr. Lillian Langstaff at the close of the address moved a hearty vote of thanks to the speaker which was seconded by Mr. W. Ward Price and Dr. Rolph Langstaff both of whom made some humorous comments on instances of the "Jonesy" type of wife with whom they had come in contact.

A very pleasant feature of the evening was a duet "The Gypsy Countess" sung by Mrs. R. Macdonald and Mr. Ward Price.

PRODUCERS PLAN CHRISTMAS MARKET

An enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the North York Producer's Association was held in the Market building at the City Limits on Wednesday night. President J. H. Young presided and the various reports showed a large increase in the membership but it is hoped in a short time to have signed up all the producers in the district. The membership fee is only $1.00 per year and may be paid to the secretary Robert Pool R. R. Eglington.

Encouraging reports were received concerning the market which has shown a steady and continuous growth since it was opened on June 19th. To date there has been 1953 sellers and fees collected amounted to $572.75. It is confidently expected that in a short time the whole venture will be self sustaining. The success of the market has been clearly evidenced by the increasing number of producers each week and the liberal patronage of customers.

Extensive plans were discussed for the Christmas Market which will be held on Tuesday evening, Thursday afternoon and evening and all day Friday of Christmas week. Committees were appointed to make all the arrangements and complete details for a competition in which prizes will be awarded for various articles of produce. The following were appointed: Finance committee to appeal to municipalities for co-operation R. Pinder Markham; L. Hicks Vaughan; C. Taylor, Scarborough; A. Lund Etobicoke; S. Herdman, N. York; C. Schmidt, with Robert. Pool as secretary
