Nelder, 24 Woodlawn avenue west, had his thigh broken. Mr. Nelder, giving a ride to his young son who arrived a short time ago from England, had just turned off Spring Garden road north on Yonge street when the radial car struck the back of the wagon before it cleared the rails.

The wagon was thrown into the air a wreck, landing in the centre of Yonge street against a southbound truck which was bumped into the opposite ditch. The horses were knocked down, but not injured.

At The Theatre

Charles R. Rogers Company Creates County Fair for "Sunset Derby."

A county fair, complete in every respect was staged by the First National Film unit producing "The Sunset Derby," the story of the race track now showing at the Bedford Theatre.

The event was staged at the Fair Grounds at Riverside, California, and the citizenry of the city turned out to act as extras for the movie, without knowing they were serving as atmosphere.

The race track in that city—now fallen into disuse through California's prohibitive laws governing the sport—also was revived into its former state of activity, and a race which was real in everything except the bookmakers was staged by the movie troupe.

"The Sunset Derby" has Mary Astor and William Collier, Jr., in the featured roles, with Ralph Lewis, Lionel Belmore, David Kirby and others in support. Charles R. Rogers produced the picture for First National, and Albert Rogell directed.

AT THE CAPITOL

Advice to shy, shrinking violets in large quantities on the subject of how to be popular is offered in Colleen Moore's new starring comedy-drama, "Naughty But Nice," which is showing at the Capitol Theatre this week.

This picture depicts the tale of a freckled, bespectacled, long-haired, awkward girl from Texas, who enters a smart finishing school on the outskirts of Washington, D.C. From being the school's prize, unnoticed dumb-bell, Colleen suddenly and mysteriously becomes the most stunning girl in the place with all the most desirable town sheiks at her feet.

Donald Reed, handsome new leading man, is the chief—and also likeable—sheik in "Naughty But Nice." Other members of the supporting cast include Claude Gillingwater, Hallam Cooley, Kathryn McGuire, Edythe Chapman and Clarissa Selwynne.

Carey Wilson scenarized "Naughty But Nice" from Lewis Allen Browne's play, "The Bigamist." John McCormick produced the picture at the First National studio in California, and Millard Webb directed it.

Newtonbrook

John McCrea, Newtonbrook, faces charges of assault and disorderly conduct, while his brother, Kenneth McCrea, Toronto, is charged with disorderly conduct and Mildred Ward Foster, Toronto, with wounding as a result of a disturbance last week-end.

It is alleged that on Saturday evening Alf Seager, neighbor of John McCrea's, on Moore Park avenue, and his blind wife were annoyed by John McCrea's children while on their way to Yonge street. Seager is said to have chased them and they went home and told their father, who, Seager alleges, came out and assaulted him, both men being quite battered up after the encounter. It is stated that on Sunday evening Mrs. Seager, who is a sister of John McCrea, called her other brother, Kenneth McCrea of Toronto, to protect her husband from her brother John McCrea came out from the city, accompanied by Mildred Ward Foster.

At about tea time a dog fight occurred on the road outside Seager's home in which McCrea's dog was involved. John McCrea rushed out of the house and while attempting to part the dogs was met by his brother, Kenneth, and another fight ensued. While this was in progress Mildred Foster is alleged to have attacked Mrs. John McCrea with a knife, wounding her in the hand.

Chief of Police R. D. Risebrough was called, and the two brothers and Mildred Foster were taken into custody.

The whole trouble will be heard in county police court next Monday.
