How to Be Your Own Ancestor.—A man in a letter to the Harrodsburg Herald claims he is his own grandfather. His letter says: "I married a widow with a grown daughter. My father, a widower, married my step-daughter, thus becoming my son-in-law and his wife, formerly my step-daughter, became my stepmother also.

My wife also became my grandmother for she was the mother of my step-mother and as the husband of any one's grandmother is called granddad, I must be my own grandfather."—Lexington (Ky.) paper.

Lindy Gets Even

Col. Lindbergh is good-natured, but some things get on his nerves. One of them is the song "Lucky Lindy," which he hates with a robust and persistent hate.

Knowing this, Chairman Bixby of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and others sang the song at a Lindbergh banquet in New York, as a little joke. Lindbergh said nothing, but awaited his revenge.

Next day he took Bixby and another of the singers for an airplane trip. Taking them to a great height, he dived, and looped and spun until they were dizzy and sick.

When their discomfiture was complete he turned around in the cockpit and shouted: "Now sing 'Lucky Lindy.'"
