A STORM

In the wilds of Northern Ontario lived John Miller, with his wife and two children. His home was a log cabin hewn out of the forest surrounding the little farm.

One day when he was at the nearest village getting provisions an adventure befell his wife. The town was about twenty-five miles away and to accomplish the trip it took two or three days. During this time his wife had to milk the cow, feed the horses and chickens.

The day was sultry and cloudy, and the east wind whistled through the trees. John had risen early and tended to the stock, while his wife prepared the breakfast. She also made him a lunch as he did not expect to reach the little town before noon. About an hour or two had passed since the man had gone forth into the forest when it started to rain. How it did pour! Peal after peal of thunder echoed and re-echoed through the vast forest. The woman shuddered as she thought of her husband out there in the darkness; for although it was morning the dark clouds that intercepted the sun and clad the earth in darkness.

Giant trees, monarchs of the forest, gave up the struggle and crashed to the ground near the threshold of the cabin. Lightning rent the skies and lit up the forest so that every minute leaf could be seen.

The rain driven on by the wind crashed against the window-panes and broke the glass so that it fell to the floor. The woman eager to keep out the cold and wet, tacked on a piece of canvas.

Suddenly there was a thud on the door. The woman ran to see who it was and there stood her husband. In he stumbled wet and cold, but after he was dry and had on different clothes he told her his story. He had not been very far away from the house when the storm started and so turning around he made all the speed he could for the cabin. He had nearly been lost several times but kept going on doggedly.

Now the storm was nearing its end and the pair looked out on the forest which had a little while ago been standing so majestically now a mass of ruins.

High School Notes

The re-organization meeting of the Literary Society was held at the Richmond Hill High School last Friday. The meeting opened with a few remarks from the retiring president, Mr. Egerton Young, who acted as chairman for the meeting. Mr. J. Koning acted as secretary pro tem. A number of candidates were nominated for the various offices and for form representatives and the results of the elections will be announced next week.

It was decided to hold meetings every two weeks and that the school paper should be read every month. After the business of the meeting prizes were presented to the following by Magistrate G. H. Duncan, chairman of the Board of Education; Mr. J. Armstrong, for highest standing in the Upper School; Mr. G. Plewman for highest standing in the Middle School; and to Miss B. Campbell for highest standing in Lower School. Principal Stewart presented prizes to Mr. Robert Little and Miss Katy Kozak and Miss D. Anderson on behalf of the donors.

MAPLE

Supper and entertainment in connection with the St. Andrew's church here held on Tuesday evening was a decided success. A splendid fowl supper was served in the Masonic Hall after which a large crowd was entertained to a delightful programme in the Community Hall by Ye Olde Tyme Village Quartette assisted by Miss Pearl Carter, Elocutionist. The proceeds for the evening amounted to $435 and the thank-offering collection on Sunday amounted to $98 which made a total of $533.00.

Living in the great cities may have its advantages but just now when the season of Hot Fowl Suppers is on, the argument is all in favor of the Country. One doubts whether even the most fashionable and most expensive hostilities of the continent have anything on their menus just as appetizing as these roast chickens, geese and turkeys or quite so palatable as the pumpkin pies which have a peculiar way of melting in your mouth which the good ladies of Maple district treated hundreds to on Tuesday evening.

St. Andrew's church was crowded on Sunday morning and evening when anniversary services were held and sermons preached by Rev. Dr. Cunningham, of Knox College. The choir of Knox Church, Vaughan, led the service of Praise, and rendered several beautiful anthems and solos.

Found Dead

Seeing no stir for several days about the home of George W. Murray, who lived alone on the Sixth Concession the neighbours decided to investigate on Saturday morning with the result that he was found lying in the yard with life extinct. It is thought that he had been there since Tuesday at an inquiry it was decided that death was due to natural causes. The funeral took place on Tuesday to Edgely.

The funeral of Mrs. E. Mahers, daughter of the late John Parkins was held on Wednesday from Laurie's Undertaking Parlours to the Lutheran cemetery.

Mr. James Woods, a former resident of this village and brother of Miss Martha Woods passed away in Sarnia on Tuesday of this week. Miss Woods is the only surviving member of the family.

Next Sunday evening, Rev. Mr. Christie of Toronto, will occupy the pulpit of the United church.

Mr. Wm. Johnson who had an operation on his arm is home again from the hospital and is improving nicely.

Mrs. John G. Keffer arrived home after spending three weeks with her sister and brothers New Forest on the Blue Water Highway. No frost there. Sweet peas and mums in full bloom.
