Bills Is Bills Pigs Is Pigs

Some of the young people who are taking upon themselves the vows of matrimony this month will doubtless discover in the not very distant future that about the most annoying thing about housekeeping and making a home is the regular arrival of bills. Just plain bills—hard, concrete, absolute facts called bills.

They appear so regularly and so persistently and sometimes so numerous that it is a wonder that someone had not imitated Ellis Parker Butler and published a treatise on "Bills Is Bills," to laugh over along with his "Pigs Is Pigs."

There are many points of similarity between the pigs that is pigs and the bills that is bills. They are similar in the matter of number and increase. Nobody wants either of them, and nobody knows what to do with them when he gets them. They are alike in that they come in the most inconvenient manner at the most inconvenient times. The historic pigs were unexpected. Bills are never really expected: Of course a person always knows that they are coming some day but that is some day, and something may happen before then, although, of course, nothing ever does. Instead, it seems all at once as though every day were some day and there are all the bills, as unexpected as the pigs.

It does not matter how you treat bills. You may look them in the face or defy them or prophesy all sorts of evil that may befall them. Bills is bills. If you forget them they multiply more rapidly. If you ignore them they come again in the next mail if you attempt to dissect them they leap together again into the same disturbing whole. One is, for example, often tempted to dissect the plumber's bill. Suppose he has charged you only $1.50 for putting a new washer in the faucet. It is possible to dissect the bill and find that washers cost five cents a dozen, but the plumber will assert that it took him two hours to put it in, and what a plumber knows, he knows. It never does any good to look into the ancestry of a bill, either. You may find that while your light bill for this month last year was very close to this month's bill, the bill for a year ago next month was twice as large and you are only borrowing trouble. It is, however, well to go prepared to meet bills at any time. Some of them, like the water bill, wait to jump out at you when you have forgotten all about them. All of these, of course, are respectable, legitimate bills. Bills that really are bills are the bills for things that we did not need and did not want.

There was one comforting thing about the pigs. It is supposed that they were all guinea pigs. There are many kinds of bills as there are things in the world—just exactly. And no matter what the variety, bills is always bills, and what is more, they seem to enjoy it. There is nothing more self-satisfied or more self-righteous than a bill. Perhaps it should be remembered, however, that there is no sense in discussing the question. Everybody knows it, and, no doubt, everybody is trying to forget it.

IT has been proved by test and by experience that good corn ensilage, when combined with hay and grain, produces the best quality beef and greatest quantity of milk—at smallest cost! A "Toronto" Silo will turn your corn into the finest ensilage, and give it 1/3 to 1/2 greater food value than when fed as dry fodder. By feeding "June feed in January" you keep your cattle healthiest, most valuable—you get more milk and better milk. A "Toronto" Silo soon pays for itself in increased profits, and earns big returns on your original investment year after year.
