TRINITY CHURCH CELEBRATES 100th ANNIVERSARY

Trinity Church, Thornhill, was filled to capacity last Friday evening, when parishioners and descendants of the pioneers of parish gathered to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of their church. Prior to the reception, Rev. Norman H. Noble, the present rector, who extended a hearty welcome to all, introduced Right Rev. J. E. Sweeney, D. D., bishop of Toronto, who preached the sermon from the 77th psalm. "I have considered the days of old and the years that are past." He congratulated the congregation on their splendid work. One hundred years seems but a short time compared with churches in the old land that are seven or eight hundred years old. Yet those years are just as important to the people of this parish whose church has stood through rebel days when gun and the trample of feet sounded the tale of war. We must think of the generations gathered here in the past; he said, of familiar faces, of emotions of happiness and of sorrow that were stirred in the breasts of those who have gone. We must think of those who passed on to us the torch held high, the flame of hope, of expectation, that we must grasp and some day pass on to others. Those were the days of foundation building. Arch Deacon Strong preached the first sermon in this church. He was the founder of Trinity College and also the founder of the church of this dominion. Bishop Sweeney went on to say that this is the day of constructive church life and clergy, laymen and women are to give all they have to this great work.

After the service the congregation adjourned to the hall where the Bishop cut a cake bearing one hundred candles. He also produced an hour glass, relic of the earliest days of the church by which the duration of the rector's sermons was measured when the sand ran out; if the congregation signified its approval the preacher would refill the glass, he stated, and continue.

P. Mortimer, a relation of the first rector, Rev. Geo. Mortimer, was among those who attended the anniversary, also Dr. Harold Parsons and C. Parsons, descendants of another of the nine rectors who have served the church in this century.

Clergymen present included, Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, Canon A. J. Fidler, Canon W. J. Brain, Rev. Dr. Sparling, Rev. P. R. Soanes, rural dean, and Rev. J. W. McDonald.

A silver communion set given by Rev. H. J. Adams, in memory of his wife, was dedicated by the Bishop during the service.

CLASSES VISIT THE FRED VICTOR MISSION

The young ladies classes of the United Church Sunday school visited the Fred Victor Mission on Sunday afternoon and were shown through the building by the head deaconess, Miss Home. Over three hundred attended the Sunday School classes, of men, women and children. Day and evening classes of sewing, domestic science and house-keeping are held for women and girls besides afternoon classes for mothers, when the children are taken care of in a special room provided for them. To most of the mothers this is the only outing they have. This mission is doing a splendid work in the down town districts and deserve any help or donations that anyone feel like giving. The Fred Victor Mission was a donation from Mr. Massey in memory of his son Fred Victor who died at the age of twenty-one. Miss Edna Wiltshire sang, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," which was beautifully rendered, and seemed to be much enjoyed by all. Mrs. McKean spoke a few words to the school.
