Certified Milk In Milk Business

At the present time dairymen, physicians and mothers are deeply interested in securing as nearly perfect milk as can be produced.

Those of you who have attended the annual meeting of the Certified Milk Producers' Association of America each year, or the various Medical Association meetings have listened to papers read by America's leading pediatricians setting forth the advantages of feeding certified milk to infants and convalescents. It is from this viewpoint that I wish to show the place certified milk holds in the business of marketing milk.

How long ago children were first fed artificially, I have been unable to learn, but in the legend "The Lives of the Saints," Mother Church tells us the first individual to artificially feed children was a Celtic monk, who is at the present time known as St. Ultain. Ultain was a monk in an Eastern monastery in Ireland at the time of the great pestilence. What the pestilence might have been, we can only surmise. It killed the parents but the children survived. In all probability, it was an epidemic of Typhus fever. Ultain gathered a large number of these babies in his monastery, and fed them milk from bottles made of Cow's horn, at the small end of which a dried nipple from a cow had been attached. It is said that while he was engaged in feeding one of the infants with his right hand, a pirate fleet appeared on the horizon with the intention of sacking the monastery. When he was informed of the visit of the Norsemen, his right hand being occupied, he made the sign of the cross towards the fleet with his left hand, and as he did so the pirate vessel sank in the sea. This is the origin of the old Irish saying, "May the left hand of Ultain be against you."

We find, as we turn the pages of history, that infants were fed all kinds of milk. In addition to cow's milk, they were fed the milk of sheep, goats, pigs and asses, and in certain countries milk from the deer. At the present time, we are told there is no reason for using any other milk than that of the cow for infant feeding, except in rare instances where goat's milk has been prescribed.

The question of what milk to buy is somewhat complicated by the multitudes of grades and kinds of milk now on the market.

Certified milk is raw milk, and differs from all other grades of market milk, in that it is more closely supervised and has thrown around it greater protection than any other dairy product, as it is produced under the direct supervision of the American Association of Medical Milk Commissioners, on selected farms where each step in the production is supervised and directed by a qualified veterinarian.

Considerable confusion exists in the minds of many people concerning certified milk, and as a consequence, their Early Monday morning, August 18th in the passing of Ida Lyon, wife of Henry Richards, death called away one of Thornhill's life-long residents. Ida Lyon, last surviving member of the family of the late John and Ann Lyon, was born in Thornhill sixty-six years ago last twelfth of January. Fifty years ago on the 16th of February, she became united in marriage to Mr. Henry Richards. From this union ten children were born of whom eight survive—Eva, Annie, Effie, Leslie and Earle at home, Mrs. B. Ainsworth of Thornhill, Mrs. Joseph Stephenson, of Elgin Mills and Harold of Toronto. Mrs. Richards who for some time has been in ill health, took a severe attack on Saturday shortly after becoming unconscious and on Monday morning quietly passed away. The deceased was a life long constant and, until her illness, was a member worker in Thornhill Trinity Church. Many friends and neighbours extend their deepest sympathy to the husband and family.
