I'm findin' fault with this and that! I threw my bootjack at the cat...

Will vanish with the snow an' ice, When spring unlocks the door.

The sun will make us sweet again With blossoms at our feet again; We'll wander, arm in arm, the ways...

Spring Work In The Garden

(By John F. Clark)

Lecturer in Horticulture, Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto

There will not be any need to uncover the garden until the bulbs start to push through. Fleshy leaved plants will require airing early...

Roses, perennials and Rock Garden plants which have been heaved by frost, should be pressed down into the soil. Gulleys in the rockery should be filled, preferably with stone chips.

If Dahlias are to be grown from cuttings, the tubers should now be excited into growth. Start the seeds of slow growing annual flowers in boxes or frames.

A light dressing of Hydrated Lime may be sprinkled over the Irises at this time. This sweetens the soil and helps to prevent rot.

When dividing clumps of perennial Phlox, the centres of the clumps should be discarded. To overcome the effect of mildew on the lower leaves of Phlox, Roses and other plants, spray with Bordeaux Mixture or dust with powdered sulphur.

Gladiolus corms should be treated in spring to prevent the spread of thrips, an insect that is doing great damage to this beautiful flower. Dissolve 1 ounce of Corrosive Sublimite in 6 gallons of water...

All shrubs including hedges and in particular those which are weak and straggly will show their appreciation of a good mulch of manure which should be left on the year round.

To kill weeds and dandelions, in the lawn, put a few drops of Sulphuric acid on an ice pick or sharp nail and stick into the heart of the plant. This proves fatal and they will not come up again.

As soon as the Paeony buds develop the small lateral buds should be removed in order to throw all the strength of the stem into the large terminal bud. This has a tendency to develop large flowers.

Roses should be planted as early as possible. Avoid crowding and shallow planting. Plant in full sunlight and provide good drainage.

Using a taxi may cost more, but it's fun not to give a darn when a fender crumples.
