Mix well together pumpkin, sugar, well beaten eggs and seasonings. Scald milk and add corn starch dissolved in a little cold milk and pour over pumpkin mixture. Stir until well mixed and pour into un-baked pastry shell and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 10 minutes to set crust and prevent pie from soaking. Reduce heat to moderate oven and when custard is set sprinkle the surface of the pie with coarsely chopped nuts (walnuts or pecans) and finish baking. Makes a large deep pie.

ANOTHER TOUGH ONE Ontario will have a long, cold winter, Campbell, an old-time fisherman and nature student of Fort Erie, said in his annual long-distance forecast. Campbell said he based his prophecy on the facts that butterflies are already spinning their cocoons instead of waiting until late in October, that squirrels are gathering and storing nuts with extra heavy shells and that melts of pigs are heavy on top and bottom. He declared when winters will be mild, pig's melts, organs of the intestines near the liver are light on top, but this year "they are heavy all round." He also claims husks of corn are unusually thick.

THE ART OF LISTENING

The art of listening, like the art of thinking, is an achievement. It is not everybody that can listen carefully, and learn thereby. Perhaps it is because few people can converse well enough to hold the average person's attention. There is something to that.

There may be times when one, amongst a crowd of people talking like blue streaks, remains silent. The silent one might be termed a quiet fellow. He may be quiet, yet be a good listener. Engage this quiet person in conversation and it might be surprising how much he knows.

The Chinese may not have a word for it, but the saying that it is better to have two ears and one mouth can be credited to them. Ancient Chinese sages 'said a mouthful' when they uttered that remark.—Regina Leader-Post.

BILLBOARD ADVERTISING

Blotting out a beautiful view is a misdemeanor as harmful to the public interest as many others which arouse a good deal more public indignation.

The reason we do not yet feel that way about it in Canada is because we have not yet made the protection of beauty a sort of passion as they have in England. But the time will come, if it is not already here, when we shall regret the day when we allowed marring objects on the landscape. Besides, the beautiful outdoors is not the place to advertise. It is the place where people should be able to get away from commercialism.

The place to advertise is where the advertising will do most good without offending people and violating amenities. That is in the newspapers.—Winnipeg Tribune.

UNSELFISH PHYSICIANS

Many excuse their delay in paying the doctor, or their complete neglect of their obligation to him, by pleading their own limited means; but it is at least selfishness, or at worst something one hesitates to say, not to economize in spending for things not necessary in order to meet a doctor's bill.

As it is, the physician sets an example of unselfish service to other professions and even to trade. Without his indispensable skill freely or generously given the depression would be far worse than it has been. That the death rate is not higher is in part due to that service seldom if ever paid in full. It is still much as it was in other times: "God and the Doctor we alike adore But only when in danger, not before. The danger o'er, both are alike required— God is forgotten and the Doctor slighted."

—New York Times.

The more modern novels you read, the more you wonder why people feel sorry for illiterates.

Of course it is illy superstition, but deliberate destruction of crops began before Nature took up the idea.
