

THE REFINING FIRE
 There are times when life seems almost dreary—
 The heart grows sad, and the body weary:
 No bright ray guides us to the morrow
 Joy is dead—naught lives but sorrow;
 The sunshine of our yesterdays grows dim
 And dimmer still, until no sunshines in.
 No sacred memories can we recall
 To cause the growing mists to rise or fall,
 And we can see outstretched no friendly hand,
 No kindly ear to hear and understand.
 There is no voice to speak a word of cheer,
 No face to smile, no eye to drop a tear.
 Alas, it seems indeed a cruel test
 When even hope lies dying in the breast!
 Such days as these are days that try the soul,
 But they who stand the test shall reach their goal!
 There is a lamp that always gleams for you,
 Somewhere; somewhere the sky is always blue;
 The mists of life are but a veil, so thin
 That in the end they'll let the sunshine in.
 If you but know, there is a guiding hand,
 A listening ear that's sure to understand—
 A face that smiles, and eyes that weep with you;
 Cheer up and greet the voice that's calling, too,
 And smile, e'en though you smile through burning tears,
 For Hope still lives to light you through.

Ornery men must be few. Every body except the candidates wishes that good men would run for office. shakes hands.

CARLOAD OF VEGETABLES SENT WEST
 The car of vegetables so generously contributed by citizens of this district was shipped from Richmond Hill last Friday and was directed to Hinton Saskatchewan where it will be distributed by a special committee to those in need.
 The shipment from Richmond Hill included 212 bags of potatoes, 79 bags turnips, 61 bags carrots, 20 bags beets, 30 bags cabbage, 5 crates cabbage, 15 bags pumpkins, 11 bags citrons, 7 bags onions, 2 bags beans, 1 bag cracked wheat, 5 bags flour, 1 carton flour, 1 parcel bacon, 1 barrel apples, 6 boxes apples, 11 cartons canned goods, 3 cases canned goods, 2 boxes preserves. The lot also included one and a half tons of cabbage loose, and one and a half tons of squash and pumpkins loose.

MANY ARE BENT BUT FEW ARE BROKEN
 It was wintertime.
 The train was rushing us on toward our destinations. Presently we passed through a forest of white birches. I noticed that some of the trees were bent over, some tops nearly touched the ground. Here and there a tree was broken, but not many. Evidently a great and mighty wind had passed through that forest. Most of the trees still stood erect as though defying anything to hurt them, unafraid of what the elements might do to them.
 Springtime came.
 Again I passed that way. Many of the trees which had been bent nearly to the ground had begun to straighten up. As their silvery leaves shimmered in the sun I fancied that they were laughing again at life. To be sure, life had handed them a raw deal. And yet, there they stood, stooping a bit in some cases, but still reaching for the sun.
 It appeared that the more they reached the straighter they grew. Only here and there was one unable to lift its head. Once in a while there was one which looked as though it might have, had it tried. Very few were those which the storm had actually broken.
 The train hurried me onward and away from the experiences of the trees. It was hurrying me toward unknown experiences of my own. As I pondered the thought that those wrenching storms, this idea flitted across my mind: How like the trees we mortals are! The storms of life rip through disturbing our peaceful calm. Some it breaks. Some it forces to drive their roots firmer in the soil of truth. Some it bends to the ground. Some of these refuse to be beaten though crushed to earth. They reach for the sun. As they reach and struggle they straighten, or are straightened. When once they know their strength and the strength of the powers of the universe which come to everything which reaches expectantly. Then it is that they knowingly laugh at the troubles of life.
 How beautiful that nature provides recuperative powers for those who laughingly reach for the sun! Many are bent but comparatively few are broken. How beautiful is life!
