MY NEIGHBOUR'S HOUSE

My neighbor's house has waxen floors That cast reflections like a pool, Her rugs like islands here and there Are colored like a Rajah's jewel.

My neighbor's books are all in place; Her walnut shelves give back the gleam, Of silver and of lovely glass; And she has time to read and dream.

There's dog's hairs scattered on my rugs There's dusty footmarks on my floor, School books are lying here and there There's finger marks upon my door.

Some day my boys will all be grown, Then how my house will gleam and shine

I'll ask you, Neighbor, in to tea, And you'll admire this house of mine.

I'll have new china, crystal too, There'll be no dogs to run and leap. "Yes," Neighbor answered, "when you do, You'll sit in loneliness and weep."

Farmer Hiram—What was your plum crop like?

Farmer Silas—Well, a heavy storm blew down 50 per cent. of it, and we'd hardly gathered that when another wind blew down the rest.

Farmer Hiram—Bad luck! Could you do anything with them?

Farmer Silas—Well, my wife ate one and I ate the other.

SNORING
People who sleep with their mouths open are the ones who snore, so it follows that the way to avoid snoring is to sleep with the mouth closed, making use of the nose for breathing.

It has been said that more than one person in ten is a chronic snorer. By that we mean that more or less regularly, for at least part of each night, they open their mouths to breathe and indulge themselves in producing those vibrating sounds which we call snores.

All snoring is noisy. Apparently men are the chief offenders; at any rate, as snorers they make the greater amount of noise. Among those conditions which favour sleep is quiet. Therefore whether he be in the home or in the pullman car, the snorer is a disturber of the sleep of others even if he does not waken himself with the noise he produces.

Babies snore, but after childhood, there are few snorers under thirty years of age. It is after thirty that snoring becomes a habit. The cause underlying the habit does not lie in the subconscious mind, but in the open mouth.

There are several reasons why our mouths open when we sleep. It commonly occurs when we fall asleep sitting in a chair, or when we lie on our backs in bed. In such cases, the muscles which support and hold up the lower jaw relax, and the mouth falls open. The most common cause of snoring, however, is some abnormal condition of the nose, which more or less blocks the free flow of air in and out. While asleep, secretions collect in the nose, particularly if the nose is congested or blocked, which during the day would be expelled, and so, first of all, there is a wheezing as the air is forced through the secretions, and later the mouth opens and snoring follows. Snoring is more common in winter, because in winter there are more colds and other infections of the nose and throat.

The remedy lies, first of all, in having the nose and throat put into a healthy condition, obstructions removed and infection treated. In young children, this generally means the removal of adenoids and tonsils. Those who snore should not sleep lying on their backs. Those who have snored for years have developed a habit which takes time to correct, even after the underlying cause has been removed. It is not only for the sake of others that snorers should be controlled, but also to secure better rest for the snorer.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.
