WILD CARROT

A weed which wants watching, Wild Carrot or Queen Ann's Lace, is spreading at an alarming rate in Ontario and is to-day considered one of our most objectionable weeds. A Biennial, it requires two years to produce seed and can easily be distinguished by its stems, flowers, and leaves which closely resemble the cultivated carrot, one of our principal vegetables which, it is claimed, originated from the Wild Carrot. It has a large succulent root which smells very much like the cultivated Carrot. This is one certain method of identifying it from Caraway, a plant which closely resembles Wild Carrot and with which it is sometimes confused.

Flowers may be seen from July to September and are in white clusters which are flat topped when open. When old, these flower clusters curl up like a bird's nest. Seeds may remain in the "nest" until late fall and winter when plants break off and be carried by the wind with drifting soil and over frozen ground and snow, scattering thousands of seeds. One farmer states that where the snow fence was erected in his field, Wild Carrot was much more prevalent, plants and seeds having been carried there by the wind.

Being a Biennial any plan for its eradication should cover a two year period. It does not give any difficulty in fields where thorough cultivation and a short rotation of crops are practised. Clovers, buckwheat, hoed crops, and early summer cultivation followed by Fall wheat and rye are excellent methods of controlling this pest. In meadows which have been down two years or more, in pasture fields, fence lines, waste places and road sides it is rapidly becoming one of our worst weeds.

Pulling, spudding, or cutting for two years in succession will not give new plants an opportunity to form seed and will lessen the amount of Wild Carrot considerably. For heavy infestations in areas which cannot be cultivated, chemical Weed Killers are the only practical solution to the problem. Experiments have proven that this weed can be destroyed by spraying with a chemical with a sodium chlorate base or with pure sodium chlorate without any permanent injury to the grass using a pound or less per gallon of water applied a day or so after the first blooms have appeared.

When the supply of pasture is unusually short and sheep are turned in before Wild Carrot becomes too far advanced, they will keep it cropped close. Pasture fields or hay fields where a single cut of hay has been taken off early should be trimmed again the latter part of August. All plants in flower are two year plants which will die that Fall. If these are kept from going to seed the Wild Carrot in the field must decrease.

An average plant may produce thousands of seeds each of which bears rows of prickles. These stick to animals, clothing, etc., and are carried long distances. Wild Carrot seed is an impurity in Timothy or Clover seed. Those keeping fields for seed are well advised to go over their fields and rogue out any carrot plants. More attention must be paid to this weed in the pasture. It is spreading at an alarming rate and grows more objectionable each year. Every effort should be made to keep it from maturing seed.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were returning home one moonlight night after a strenuous day's shopping:

Wife (exclaiming suddenly): Oh, John, what a lovely moon!

John (absent minded): Yes, how much is it?

CAPITOL THEATRE

MOST NOTABLE DRAMATIC CAST ASSEMBLED FOR "BECKY SHARP"

In the Pioneer Pictures all-color feature "Becky Sharp" motion picture audiences will be treated to the performance of probably the most imposing dramatic cast ever assembled for a motion picture. Assembled from all corners of the world, there are only two of the players who have not carved out names for themselves on the legitimate stages of the world.

Miriam Hopkins, acknowledged star of the screen and one of the three greatest actresses on the American stage, steps into the shoes of Minnie Maddern Fiske to carry the name of Becky Sharp brilliantly into the great new color era of the screen.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, knighted in 1934 for his contributions to the English stage, and greatest star in the British Empire, crossed the Atlantic to make his American film debut as the Marquis of Steyne, made famous by none other than Tyrone Power and George Arliss.

Frances Dee winning high laurels in such pictures as "Little Women" and "Of Human Bondage," is playing the biggest part of her career as Amelia Sedley.

Billie Burke, long a favorite star of both the American and English stages and one of the most popular of screen celebrities, appears as the snobbish Lady Bareacres.

Nigel Bruce, another favorite star of the English stage who has an enviable reputation as a character actor of the screen, also crossed from England to appear in this picture. Alison Skipworth, stage and screen star, plays the tempestuous Miss Crawley.

Alan Mowbray, one of the most accomplished and versatile actors of both stage and screen, drew the call for the part of Rawdon Crawley.

William Faversham, a star of Mrs. Fiske's day who has the distinction of having played in more than sixty different starring stage roles, brings the Duke of Wellington to this picture.

William Stack, for years the star of London's famous "Old Vic" theatre Doris Lloyd, George Hassell and Charles Richman are others who have earned the right, by reason of their accomplishments, to be included in this stellar cast.

"Becky Sharp" is an adaptation of the Langdon Mitchell stage play which was adapted from Thackeray's famous "Vanity Fair." The screen play was written by Francis Edward Faragoh. Rouben Maboulian is the producer.

Robert Edmond Jones, outstanding designer of the New York stage, designed the picture in color.

With such a great combination of acting and technical talent and genius, plus a literary and stage classic, it is little wonder that "Becky Sharp" is rated as an outstanding achievement of motion picture art, and will be shown at the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Purring cats hide claws in soft paws and many a smooth sounding politician has later handed the public a ripping wallop.

FOURTEEN ERRORS OF LIFE

To expect to set up our own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

Not to yield to unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to alleviate if we can all that needs alleviation.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

To live as if the moment, the time, the day were so important that it would live forever.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.
