David J. Leslie of Toronto was 84 years of age on February 29th, which was his 20th birthday. There was no Feb. 29th in 1900 and consequently he went eight years in one stretch without a birthday. A great-granddaughter, Dorothy Pratt, was 12 on Feb. 29th, thus celebrating her third birthday.

"You may not like it but if you've got a severe cold, you're a pest and should be quarantined just as if you had measles or scarlet fever." So says Dr. Helen McMurchy in the leading article in the March issue of the Canadian Journal of Medicine and Surgery. Dr. McMurchy further states that the common cold causes half the deaths in Canada every year.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Cheesemakers' Short Course

The Cheesemakers' Short Course which is usually held during the second week of February at the Eastern Dairy School, Kingston, is postponed until March 24 to 27. Weather and travelling conditions are likely to be more favourable than in mid-winter. The latter part of March is just before the opening of the cheese factory season and the information obtained will be fresh in the minds of the makers.

Idea for Sugar Bush

Ambrose Chambers, who operates a large sugar bush near the village of Waterford, Ontario, has hit upon an excellent time-saving device in the matter of emptying sap buckets. He paints one-half of the outer surface of the pail red and the other half yellow. When he has emptied each pail, he turns it around, so that from a distance he can easily tell which pails have been emptied, thus saving a great many steps. It is necessary, of course, to have a hole in each side of the upper edge of the bucket so that it can be hung on the tree with either the red or the yellow colour showing.

King George As Farmer

King George loathed ostentation and publicity where his private activities were concerned. The late Lord Ponsonby, Keeper of the Privy Purse, told a story only five days before his death which well illustrates this trait.

A certain farm-manager on one of the royal farms bought a bull at a very high price. It swept the board at all agricultural shows. Finally it was sold at an even higher price.

The King said nothing until the animal had gone. Then, one Sunday afternoon, on his usual walk around the farms, he enquired if they had not bought some rather expensive cattle recently.

The farm-manager agreed. But, he added, the bull had won many prizes and had been sold at a good profit.

"Understand this," the King replied, "I farm as an ordinary farmer and exhibit my beasts in competition with other farmers. They can't pay high prices and neither will I. As for winning prizes by paying large sums for beasts, any Hoggenheimer can do that. I won't."

Hay Market Report

There has been very little movement of hay from the production areas of eastern Ontario this season and there is little indication of improvement in the situation for some time. The principal movement in both northern and eastern Ontario has been of small lots to local dealers in the towns and villages, and this hay is mostly being bought locally at $5 per ton. There is still a lot of hay in south-western Ontario although large quantities have been used on the farm, the result of the cold weather. There has been some difficulty in trucking hay into towns and cities recently on account of snow, nevertheless there is ample local hay to meet requirements. Good supplies of hay are reported from Bruce and Gray counties, along the Soo line and around Powassan.

Prices being paid growers in this part of the province are: for no. 2 timothy and mixtures, $7.50 to $8.50; no. 3, $5.00 to $6.50; oat and wheat straw, $2.50 to $3; alfalfa, $4 to $10.

Lamb Campaign

Extension of the campaign inaugurated last year by the Canadian Lamb Committee to eliminate seasonal fluctuations in the price and consumption of fresh Canadian Lamb, has just been announced by W. H. J. Tisdale of Toronto, assistant general manager of the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, and chairman of the committee.

"The enthusiastic co-operation of the press and radio was responsible for the success of our initial work in Ontario and Montreal last fall," declared Mr. Tisdale, "and the committee will continue its efforts on a Dominion-wide scale. Our aim is to acquaint Canadian housewives with the varied and attractive possibilities of fresh lamb and to have it more frequently included in the diet of every Canadian family."

The increased consumption of fresh Canadian lamb, he pointed out, will be of enormous benefit to farmers and sheepbreeders across Canada and will contribute substantially to the return of agricultural prosperity, so vital to economic stability.

"Increased lamb consumption will also reflect favorably in every Canadian homemaker's budget," added Mr. Tisdale, explaining that recent improvements in feeding and marketing have made fresh lamb uniformly available every month of the year at consistently moderate prices.

Canada lags far behind other British countries with an annual per capita consumption of 7.2 lbs., he said, while New Zealand has 144.4, Australia 82, South Africa 24.3, and Great Britain 31.

A Plan for the Woodlot

Man does not realize or appreciate fully the value of certain factors and influences that help to make life more comfortable and pleasant until they are taken away for a time. Woodland in the agricultural sections of Ontario is an excellent example of this as all farms had plenty of wood for fuel and timber to build houses and barns. There was so much that it was very difficult to conceive the prospect of a shortage, but to-day there are many farms without woodlots and the farmer with a fine woodlot is envied by his neighbours.

Woodlots have a definite part in the economic set-up of an agricultural section and the individual farm, and if a sufficient percentage of land is not left in woodland there are liable to be discomforts and loss as the influences of woodland are far reaching.

Value of Woodland to Agriculture

1. The farmer with a woodlot has a cheap and convenient supply of fuel, while the one without a woodlot has to haul wood long distances and make a cash outlay to purchase coal or wood, and often the farmhouse is not adequately heated.

2. Springs and wells that previously had a steady supply of water go dry, because the woodland that was a reservoir has been removed.

3. The farmer has more difficulty to grow crops and wheat and clover kill out because the fields lack the protection that is given by woodland.

4. Deforestation on hillsides and valleys is often followed by erosion and sandy soil is liable to develop into valueless sand dunes.

5. Woodland helps to control floods as it retards the surface runoff in all seasons.

6. Scattered woodland increase considerably the beauty of a countryside.

7. The various factors mentioned have a marked influence on the monetary value of farms.

DUKE OF MONMOUTH

In its issue of Nov. 2nd the Toronto Star Weekly carried an article written by M. H. Hutton, correspondent to the Star papers in London, England. The title was "Scotland sends the Bride" and in describing the bride of the Duke of Gloucester stated that she is a descendant of the Duke of Monmouth "who was executed after leading a rebellion against William of Orange almost three centuries ago."

It is very true that Monmouth was executed for leading a rebellion, not against William of Orange, but against James II who became King of England after the death of his brother Charles in 1685. The rebellion led by Monmouth and his execution took place the same year.

During the reign of Charles, Monmouth enjoyed great popularity in England and was a great favorite among the common people. On the death of Charles he claimed the throne as his son.

For a time he lived in Holland and from there crossed over with a small band of followers and landed in the west of England where he was accorded an enthusiastic reception by the common people. Being poorly equipped and possessing little money his uprising could not continue against the forces of the government and his followers were soon scattered and himself captured, tried and executed. So great was his popularity that of him a well known historian has written—"His hold on the hearts of the people lasted till the generation that knew him had passed away. Riches, buckles, and other trifling articles of apparel that he had worn, were treasured up as precious relics by those who had fought under him at Sedgemoor. Old men who long survived him desired, when they were dying, that these trinkets might be buried with them. Nay, such was the devotion of the people to their unhappy favorite that, in the face of the strongest evidence by which the fact of a death was ever verified, many continued to cherish a hope that he was still living and that he would again appear in arms. A person, it was said, who was remarkably like Monmouth, had sacrificed himself to save the Protestant hero. The vulgar long continued at every important crisis to whisper that the time was at hand and that "King Monmouth" would soon show himself. In 1686, a knave who had pretended to be the Duke, and had levied contributions in several villages of Wiltshire, was apprehended, and whipped from Newgate to Tyburn.

In 1698, when England had long enjoyed constitutional freedom under a new dynasty, the son of an innkeeper passed himself on the Yeomanry of Sussex as their beloved Monmouth and defrauded many who were by no means of the lowest class. Five hundred pounds were collected for him. The farmers provided him with a horse. Their wives sent him baskets of chickens and ducks and were lavish, it was said, of favors of a more tender kind. When the fa-poster was thrown into prison for his fraud his followers maintained him in luxury. Several of them appeared at the bar to countenance him when he was tried at the Horsaam assizes. So long did this delusion last, when George the third had been some years on the English throne, Voltaire thought it necessary gravely to confute the hypothesis that the man in the iron mask was the Duke of Monmouth."
