This session there have been many bright episodes and some not so bright. There hasn't been anything yet to approach that classic of William Duckworth's last session when he was speaking on the budget. The Conservative member for Dovercourt convulsed the House when he stated that the Liberal Party was in the "valley of illumination." This was unconscious humor at its best. But there have been some bright moments feet of feeding space is the miniin otherwise drab debates and a silent but heartfelt vote of thanks goes out to those members of the Ontario Legislature who, innocently or otherwise, unite both sides of the House Thornhill in the jolly comradeship of a hearty

> There is the flashing wit of Premier Hepburn whose liking of a good joke, whether on himself or somebody else, is well known. Then there is Provincial Sec. Harry Nixon who darts in with a sly remark and then retreats with a smile to await the comeback of his adversary. This darting in and darting out habit has caused Mr. Nixon to be known as "Negus Nixon" with apologies to the Emperor of Ethiopia, whose soldiers dart in, kill, and then retreat to fight another day. Messrs. Faulkner, Mc-Questen, Marshall and Leduc sometimes display a sense of humor, but not often. Hon. David Croll, Welfare Minister and "baby" of the cabinet, has a habit of popping up with a funny quip that sets both sides

On the other side of the House there is the ponderous but effective humor of Opposition Leader George S. Henry. There is sometimes a tinge of acidity in Mr. Henry's humor, particularly when the Prime Minister is involved. Then there is Arthur Ellis, Conservative member for South Ottawa. No one on the government side has anything but the keenest respect for the calibre of this member who has the faculty of combining his attacks on the administration with delicate sarcasm. A quick thinker, he is at his best when clashing with one or more members of the government. > Getting Ready For the Lambing Season

Lambing is the shepherd's harvest and it is also his most exciting time. Everything must, therefore, be in readiness for the coming of the new

Ewes heavy in lamb require more pen and feeding space, if overcrowding and losses are to be avoided. Two mum required.

Large flocks should be divided by putting the ewes expected to lamb first in the warmest and most comfortable pen.

Have the floor level, dry, clean and well bedded. If possible provide equipment for making individual lambing pens. Folding hurdles are very handy for that purpose. The ewe is much quieter if kept alone.

Need Green Feed in Winter The average farm poultry flock of 35 hens requires approximately onehalf acre of greens if the proper amount of green feed during the winter months is provided. As soon as moisture is available to germinate rye, oats or wheat, the planting of either one or all three of these grains to furnish greens for the laying flock during the fall and winter months is advisable.

Green feed is high in vitamins, minerals and proteins, three essential nutrients of a poultry ration, and it serves a conditioner, as well as being high in nutrients. No other one thing will pay as large dividends for the amount of money invested as an adequate acreage of green feed for the poultry flock.

Repair of Machinery

Careful repairing of tillage machinery each winter or early spring with replacement of doubtful or worn parts has been proven to pay large dividends by preventing major costly repairs. Tillage implements generally receive less care and more hard 9 knocks than any other class of farm machinery.

The value of any implement can only be measured by its usefulness in acres covered, quality of work done and freedom from the necessity of costly repairs and delays. Delays due to breakdowns during the rush tillage season of spring and summer are costly and easily prevented if the farmer, with a few tools and a little time, will check over carefully every working or wearing part long before he is going to use the ma-

Check over every machine carefully for loose, worn or stripped bolts; replace broken spring washers and check all loose or slack parts. Wheel and power lift bearings, disk boxings and all moving parts should be adjusted for wear. Clean all working parts of old grease, oil, dirt and steel particles with kerosene and replace with plenty of fres lubricants.

An Evergreen Windbreak For Farm Buildings (By I. C. Marritt)

Most farmers would be pleased if there was an evergreen windbreak near their buildings as it improves living conditions by breaking the high cold winds of winter and by reducing snow drifting around buildings and along roads. It improves the landscape as it gives a setting to the building and screens undesirable views.

Many farmers have fine windbreaks that have been planted 30-50 years and others have started windbreaks within the past fifteen years with the trees that have been distributed free by the Forestry Branch. But there are at least 75% of the farms where no start has been made. Why don't more farmers plant windbreaks? The principal reason is that a windbreak cannot be secured in a short period as it takes 10-30 years to grow one. Many farmers will be on the same farm fifteen years hence and there will not be a windbreak 1 then if it is not started soon.

The windbreak may be one row 1 or several rows. The one of several rows is a much better windbreak and should be planted if possible. Many have planted a single row with the mistaken idea that two rows require The nursing sow and litter require double the area.
