GOOD COMPANY
 Coarse brown bread
 And a cup of tea,
 These I have found
 Good company.
 No better comrades
 Could I ask,
 Than the will to do
 My own hard task.
 These are the wisest
 Kindest friends;
 A bed, and the stars
 When the daylight ends.
 And my own heart
 When it is glad
 Is the best companion
 I ever had.
 Grace Nowell Crowell.

A friend suggests that this column advise vacationists to go to a hotel or resort because vacationing with friends isn't what it is cracked up to be. He says you always feel conscious of the extra work you give them and you don't feel comfortable, adding that it might cost more at a hotel, but you won't have to say: "No, I've got enough" when you're still hungry and you won't have to jump out of bed when you've still got a couple of hours sleep in your system, and you won't have to think all of the time, "Are we still welcome?"

Aunt Sidonia, an Alabama Negress, was a great advocate of the rod as a help in child-rearing. As a result of an unmerciful beating which she gave her youngest and "orneriest," she was brought into court one day by outraged neighbors. The judge, after giving her a severe lecture, asked if she had anything to say.
 "Jest one thing, jedge," she replied. "I wants to ax you a question. Was you ever the parent of a puffedly wuthless cullid chile."
