The political pot in Ontario is starting to simmer again and the Conservative Party is beginning to let off a lot of steam up and down the countryside. Since the elevation of Hon. Earl Rowe to the leadership of the Conservative forces, there has been plenty of speechmaking and firing of broadsides, though little damage has been done. The good old summer time is not the best period in the year for political manoeuvres. It's too hot.

The Conservatives show plenty of signs of rejuvenation. They are not the despondent, ailing party of immediately after the 1934 election. There has been a blood transfusion and the warriors are champing on the bit, awaiting the signal to tear the Liberals to pieces. But, unfortunately for them, the signal for political warfare will not be made by their new chief. When the Hepburn Government decides to bring on a general election then, and then only, will the signal be given, and it is a safe bet that the Hepburn cabinet will follow the usual procedure in such cases and hold back until the time is most opportune for them.

That the Liberals are not underestimating the strength and ability of the Conservatives is evidenced by the plans which have been made by the party strategists to acquaint the people with what they have done since taking office. By the time this appears in print, Premier Hepburn will be on the last stage of a speaking tour in both old and New Ontario. It is the first time since the election that he has made a speaking tour lasting more than two or three days.

The Conservatives are believed to be somewhat handicapped in the matter of political ammunition. True, there is the Separate School issue, but many observers do not feel that this will be such a strong selling point as formerly believed. It is certain the government's opponents will exploit this issue for all it is worth but whether it will be enough to swing the tide in their favor is something else again.

Then there is the Hydro business to be fought all over again. The old cry of sanctity of contracts will be dragged out once more for vote catching purposes, but here again the Conservatives have an issue of rather doubtful quality. It is not thought the Hydro attack will be as effective as the Separate School issue.

On the other side of the fence there is the undeniable fact that if the Hepburn government can, as they have promised, balance the budget and show a small surplus, they will be in a comfortable position, so far as finances are concerned, when they appeal to the people. But it is a question whether the electors will pay as much attention to figures as they will to the rabble-rousing cries of those desiring to upset the government. It has been the experience in

(By Oliver N. Warren)

Sunday: They are to be a sirkus in are city tomorro and I am wandering what to do about the sitcheashen. I used up more than my quoto of grammas during the opening serivs of the base ball season.

Monday: Well, I managed OK They I aint taken down with yit & I told Ma early in the a. m. I felt like I had abscentitis & she got scart & sed stay out of skool then. I did & rikoovered at one 45 p. m.

Tuesday: The teacher ast us all to give her a hard question & Blisters stumpt her. He sed why is it a shipment of frate & a cargo when cent on a ship? Smart as am I, I don't just prezakky no myselluf.

Wednesday: The evnings are a bekoming longer & are family driv over to a nabor city in the ford. Pa was driving & a cop stopt him, lookt feerce & sed Say, this is a 1-way street. Pa lookt innocent & replide Well, I was going only 1 way, witch got the cop.

Thursday: The teacher ast Jane what is a metaphor & she thot sum & replide, A place to keep sheeps & gotes in. I think the dum dame will pass tho. Her pa is on the skool bord.

Friday: Jake thinks he is just about it when it comes to spoken peaces like the boy stood on the burning deck and etc & says when skool is out his Pa says he chall have a coarse in electrocushen.

Saturday: This is in the late p. m. & I Xpect I play in tuffer luck than mitey near nobuddy. I told Pa I xpected the fish wood bite & he sed, never mind son, they won't bite you. & I spent they day hoing the garden & fiten dandy lions & sleep. Better luck next time I sed to I.
