

HOME OWNERS BENEFIT BY SWANSEA WORK PLAN

Swansea Village has an employment system all its own that not only helps its home owners who are without work to secure employment at $4 per day, whenever there is a public works project under way in the municipality, but also provides the channel whereby the owner who is in arrears of taxes may have half of his wages applied to his account. The system is carried out under the direction of Adam Ternent, commissioner of works, who keeps a register of all home owners in the municipality who have signified their desire to work on village public works. Those home owners who desire half of their wages to be applied to their tax arrears sign a sheet indicating their intention.

When a contract or other work is being carried on, Commissioner Ternent distributes the jobs as equitably as possible without any reference to whether the man in question owes taxes or not, for he is not in possession of the rolls showing tax arrears.

By this method many Swansea home owners are provided with work, whereby they can not only support their families but in several instances pay tax-arrears and thus keep their homes clear of such encumbrances. In many other cases the system provides work for home owners who do not owe taxes.

With several contracts for the laying of water mains, sewers and pavements under way at the present time, there is not a single home owner who is able to work and has signified his desire to do so, that has not been given a job for the time being, according to Reeve R. J. Wallace.

Whenever a contract is let for public improvements by the Village Council a clause is always inserted favoring local labor and the commissioner of works provides the contractor with the men for the job in question.

Under this system seventeen owners were enabled to pay a portion of their tax-arrears last week as well as earning money for themselves on municipal contract jobs, while several other owners, not owing taxes, were also enabled to secure employment they otherwise would not have secured.

On many occasions there are more men working on these jobs who do not owe taxes than those who do, a municipal official stated in emphasizing the fact that because a man does not owe taxes it does not prevent him from securing this employment.

Public improvement jobs which have been let to independent contractors, all of whom employ local labor, and which are providing work at the present time, include the following: Sanitary and storm sewers and water mains in the Woodland Heights area; water mains on Valleymead and on the lanes between Ellis Park road and Wendigo Way and paving on Olympus avenue and Ellis Park road.

Practically the same system has been in operation for the past two years and according to municipal authorities is working exceptionally satisfactorily. The men are paid by the village treasurer, the amount being deducted from the contract price.

Councillor George Middleton is the 1936 chairman of the works' committee.

This year the Canadian National Exhibition completes a record of fifty-eight years of uninterrupted progress and has richly earned its reputation as the world's greatest annual exposition.

FORD WISHES HE WAS YOUNG AGAIN

Motor Car Magnate Envis Generations To Come — Was 74 July 30. Young People Will Have So Many Opportunities

Henry Ford of Detroit, whose influence through the automotive industry has done much to change the habits and thinking of the civilized world entered his 75th year, July 30, wishing he was young again, envying the generations to come for the opportunities they will have.

In Mr. Ford's vision of a mechanistic, scientific tomorrow, there are so many opportunities, he said in an interview just before going on a brief vacation, that "I envy the young people who will have a chance to grab them."

Active, almost sprightly in manner, still retaining the youthful point of view which is said to be characteristic of his great vision, Mr. Ford said he foresees improvements of living standards which "are coming so fast that nothing can stop them."

"There'll be no turning back," he continued. "There will be growth, and natural growth can't be turned back and stopped. Behind growth you'll find ideas and good ideas can't be killed. You'll always find men who have ideas and will sacrifice everything for their ideas. Such men can't be hired by bosses, or stopped by capitalists. They're free because they live only for their ideas. And they are responsible for the growth that can't be stopped."

Mr. Ford expects a marked improvement in transportation through man's research into the problem of obtaining a greater portion of power available in fuels. Shelter, he said, will be provided in forms and by methods as yet unpredictable. There will be drastic changes in the provision of man's food.

A factor Mr. Ford expects to be important in promoting the improved standards of living is a new attitude toward money evinced by this rising generation.

"There is a big change taking place in the minds of young people about the relative values of spending and saving," he said. "If you want to find out about the change, talk to young people. It's getting difficult for parents to convince their children that they should save money instead of spending it."

"The young folks can't see any sense in putting money away so some one can take it away from them. They want to use money in the way it was designed to be used."

Mr. Ford said he believes this valuable lesson was learned during the years of depression.

Although his son, Edsel, has become the accredited voice of the industrial empire established by Henry Ford, the latter has by no means lost his zest for conquest.

Just as in 1893, when he was a $15-a-week engineer in the Detroit Edison plant, the deafening noise made by the turning over of his first experimental motor sounded the knell of the horse and buggy era of transportation, today Mr. Ford thinks he can eliminate the cow from modern life as easily as he effected the replacement of the horse.

A few years ago, Mr. Ford precipitated a furry of witticisms when he suggested that the cow could be ousted from modern life. He still adheres to that conviction.

"I'd like to devote about three years to the elimination of the cow," he said. "There is no reason in the world why the chemist can't discover the cow's secret of converting vegetation into dairy products. And there's less reason why the chemist can't do a better job of it after he learns how."

The ever popular Strolling Troubadors, foreign groups of vocalists and instrumentalists in national costume, will again be a Canadian National Exhibition highlight this year on Music Day.

Here is a Scotch story with a Highland flavor but it is not a jab at Scotch thrift. It is a story of an altogether different color.

In a Scottish village a boot repairer, who was a strict teetotaler, was passing the local "pub" when the landlord was assisting a customer off the premises.

"Here, John," called the publican, "ye might gie this chap an arm tae his hoose."

"Na, na!" replied the cobbler. "Ye should dae what I dae when I've feenished a job—put it in the show window."—North Carolina Christian Advocate.
