CONSUMER EXPRESSES VIEWS ON T. B. TESTING

Editor, The Liberal Sir:—

I was surprised to read in your valuable paper some objections from certain farmers expressed at Markham council meeting against the testing of cows for T. B. As I understand it the cause of the complaint is that so many of the cattle are condemned that it is a hardship. As I understand it a farmer receives two thirds of the valuation for a cow that is condemned and in addition gets whatever the carcass is worth for meat. I don't think anything could be more fair, and why anyone would want to keep a diseased animal around the place for is beyond me. I am sure the great majority of farmers will heartily agree that they are better off without the diseased animals which are capable of spreading this dread affliction.

Some farmers may have a small loss if they have many go down but I am sure in the long run the farming community and everyone else will benefit greatly.
