Ottawa Spotlight

By Wilfrid Eggleston Ottawa, Oct. 20.—On Friday of this week the government celebrates its first anniversary of office. It is interesting to see how many election pledges have been redeemed...

It promised a national commission to deal with unemployment: this has been set up and has made some constructive suggestions to the cabinet, as well as conducting a census of national unemployment.

A National system of unemployment insurance is another pledge. This has not moved since the election. The matter is before the Privy Council.

One of its most important planks dealt with the liberation of external trade and the lowering of tariffs. Though the low-tariff wing of the Liberal party is far from satisfied with progress to date, it is probably true that, counting the United States agreement, the tariff has been lowered more than in any previous year in Canadian history.

Negotiations have been conducted with 15 countries in the year. Three or four agreements have already been completed: others are to follow.

Some salutary changes in tariff administration have been introduced. Low-tariff Liberals claim that the present law still gives the departmental heads too much power of tariff making.

The Liberals pledged themselves to "seek to end artificial price control and agreements in restraint of trade." It is difficult, aside from the tariff reductions which may have some price control more difficult, to discover any material fulfillment of this item yet.

But one hears that at the forthcoming session new legislation will strengthen the present anti-combines law. (Encourage Primary Industry)

Another pre-election pledge dealt with encouragement to primary industry and the lowering of costs of production. It also promised state assistance in the marketing of natural products. The elimination of the income tax on young metaliferous mines and the promise that the gold tax will not be increased are two examples of action in this field.

Machinery is being worked out for assistance in exporting live cattle and other agricultural products. The promise was made that a "properly constituted" central bank would be set up. This, as seen by Liberal leaders, means a bank of which the ownership and direction is under the majority control of parliament and the government of the day.

To that extent it has been redeemed. An investment control board was to be established. This is apparently still to come. The integrity of the Canadian National was to be maintained. There is no present talk of amalgamation.

The abolition of the 'bank cheque' legislation has been carried out, as promised. (Favors Free Speech)

Section 98 of the Criminal Code was to have been repealed. The substitute clause, in the opinion of some critics, was almost as obnoxious. But this government is unquestionably in favor of freedom of speech and assembly.

The government is pledged to reform electoral machinery so as to obtain a true parliamentary representation, and to reduce the cost of election campaigns. This problem has been studied, but no action has yet been taken.

The government is to balance the budget. Again, minor progress has been made, but there is a long distance to travel yet. The drought made it harder, for this year.

Peace and good-will was to be fostered between nations. The fair and just distribution of wealth with increasing regard to human needs, to the furtherance of social justice and the promotion of the common good was to be stressed.

Not a bad idea to remind ourselves occasionally what the present government promised to do. On the whole the record of the first year is pretty fair, as governments go. Supporters will be more enthusiastic. Critics will be less laudatory. But everyone agrees there is a gigantic job for the government yet to accomplish.
