It is not would help. I do not like to say so, safe in all communities. There is overwhelming evidence that many diseases including tuberculosis, both bovine and human, undulant fever, septic sore throat, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and diphtheria are carried by raw milk.

Since milk can be made safe, it is the obvious duty of governments to provide for such safety. This can only be done under present circumstances by universal pasteurization of all milk supplies.

The opponents of pasteurization usually confine their arguments to saying that the process of pasteurization destroys certain qualities in the milk so treated; that it allows of the use of dirty milk; that children and calves fed on pasteurized milk fail to thrive so well as those fed on the raw article and that the cost of milk to the consumer would, in the event of pasteurization, be increased. They do not deny, because they cannot, in the face of the evidence, that raw milk is productive of repeated epidemics of disease, but they say that tuberculosis from milk may be prevented by the use of milk from accredited herds. They conveniently forget that the accredited herds will fail to protect children and others against, for example, typhoid and scarlet fever, undulant fever, septic sore throat and a host of other infections carried by raw milk. They forget too, that milk from accredited herds has been known to spread tuberculosis and besides it will take some years to complete the establishment of such herds in Ontario.

Let us examine the various objections to pasteurization. That pasteurized milk loses none of its value in the process is proven by investigations carried on in Great Britain, TAKE NOTICE: in the United States and elsewhere, which show that school children fed Corporation of the Village of Richon pasteurized milk, not only thrive mond Hill intends to construct a 2 HOLSTEIN BULLS 12 months old, calves. Similarly pasteur- day of March, 1938. ization of milk makes it safe for use.

The cost of pasteurization depends upon the quantities handled. In small plants the cost may reach to onehalf cent a quart. In large plants the cost is infinitesimal. This cost should be assumed, not by the farmer, but by those benefitting thereby, odical collections of refuse will be namely the consumer. Heretofore, protection against contaminated milk has been given to the people of the large cities and towns, while rural communities have suffered from the epidemics carried by raw milk. It is time that the children of our villages and countryside should have similar protection.

There are, as one clinician suggests, three things to think of in relation to the proposed measure of pasteurization. Raw Milk is often dangerous! Certified Milk, even if Richmond Hill, March 10, 1938. entirely safe, which it is not, is under present conditions impracticable! Pasteurized Milk is the only safe milk! Why not have it?
