Peace Appeal To Kaiser Monsignor Pacelli reached Munich in May, 1917, and the next month had an important conversation with Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg on. Germany's aims in the war. The Kaiser later received him at his general headquarters at the front. Pacelli delivered to the Emperor a letter from Pope Benedict XV, in which the Pontiff begged the Kaiser to use his every effort for peace, even if it meant that Germany had to make some sacrifices. The Pontiff also asked the Kaiser to use his influence to end the deportations of Belgians to work in Germany.

The Nunico made long and careful reports on his interviews, and these may have formed some of the background for Benedict XV's famous effort of Aug. 1, 1917, to mediate between the central powers and the allies.

After the war he remained in Germany and went through the trying days of the post-war reconstruction. In 1919 he showed great courage when a group of Spartacists, with revolvers aimed, rushed into the nunciature. Pacelli, wearing the purple of a bishop, met the revolutionists with quiet courage, unflinchingly told them they were in an embassy privileged by international agreement and warned them against harming a foreign diplomat. The Spartacists, abashed, left him in peace.

In these years Pacelli won the esteem and gratitude of the Germans for the work he did on behalf of the people of the Ruhr. At that time, too, he negotiated a concordat between the Holy See and Bavaria.

At Berlin, Pacelli became the dean of the diplomatic corps because of 1 Grey Horse, Percheron, 10 years 1 Plow, Fleury, No. 21 the fact that he was the first Envoy 1 Grey Mare, Percheron, 10 years Plenipotentiary accredited to the new 1 Bay Mare, Clyde, 10 years German Republic.
