Wise-Harris

Trinity Church, Thornhill, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, June 24th at 3 o'clock, when the Rev. N. Noble, assisted by the Rector, Rev. J. Colclough, united in marriage Winnifred Annie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Harris, "Charmwood", Langstaff, and Mr. Frank E. Wise, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wise of Sarnia. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Udall and during the signing of the register Miss Doreen Johnson sang "O Promise Me."

The bride, given in marriage by her father was lovely in a white taffeta dress on Princess lines and wearing full length embroidered veil, and her mother's bridal wreath of Orange Blossoms. She carried a sheaf of sweetheart roses. The bride's attendants were Miss Jenny Wise, sister of the groom as maid of honor, wearing a blue sheer crepe dress and silk net, Miss M. Fice of Aurora wearing egg shell blue sheer crepe and Miss Gracie of Welland wearing peach sheer crepe, Miss Copeland of Woodham wearing purple sheer crepe, and all wore matching picture hats and carried sheafs of pink carnations. The best man was the groom's brother and the ushers were Mr. L. Middlemiss of Langstaff, Mr. G. Ibbetson of Toronto, and Mr. I. Williams of Langstaff.

A reception was held in the Parish Hall where the bride's mother received in Delphinium blue sheer crepe with white accessories and was wearing a corsage of sweetheart roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, gowned in a printed crepe dress with navy blue sheer crepe over dress with matching hat and was wearing sweetheart roses. The church was lovely with orange blossoms, peonies, roses and Delphiniums placed there by Mrs. F. Allen and the tables were decorated by the W.A. of Trinity. The bride's mother is a member.

For travelling the bride chose an Aquamarine blue crepe dress, wool coat to match, and white accessories. The honeymoon trip is through northern Michigan.

Friends of the late John Ground were shocked at his sudden passing on Wednesday last week. He was highly respected and farmed here for several years on the farm of the late Thomas Lane. After he moved to Toronto he entered the real estate business where he and his son were successful and carried on until the time of his death. He is survived by his widow and son William.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heintzman and family are leaving the end of the week to spend the summer at their cottage in Muskoka.

Miss E. Clubine visited with her sister Mrs. A. Wisner, in Aurora, last week.

Miss MacGregor of Toronto spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Thompson.

During the summer months the Public Library will be open only on Friday evening.

During Rev. E. B. Cooke's vacation Rev. Dr. Smith of Willowdale will take charge of the services at 11 a.m. During July and August there will be no evening service.

Miss Olive Lloyd of Mt. Albert visited last week with Mrs. Echlin and Mrs. F. Davies. Mrs. Echlin returned with Miss Lloyd for a holiday.

Miss Lillian Francis left last week to spend the summer at her cottage at Balm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Woods and family are spending the summer at Prince Edward Island.

Miss F. Clubine, Mrs. Wells and Mrs. G. Lowry spent a few days last week at Palmyra, New York.

The members and friends of the United Church and Sunday School held a picnic on Wednesday at Woodland Beach. Swimming, games and races were enjoyed by all.

Mrs. W. Brooks is visiting in Buffalo this week.

Toronto Maple Leafs Take On New Life Under New Manager

When something like eight thousand spectators turn out to see a ball game it is a healthy sign; when that number rallies to the support of a team at the tail-end of a pennant race, that is a miracle. Yet that is exactly what happened when the Toronto Maple Leafs, who are running last in the current International League derby, returned home from its last road trip. Indeed, so unprecedented was this welcome home that baseball writers all over America declared it to be the greatest demonstration of whole-hearted enthusiasm ever spread out for a trailing team in all the long history of organized baseball.

Of course there were special circumstances contributing to this history-making event. While the club was still on the road its owners, tiring of criticism and of looking at the vast open spaces in the stadium at home games, decided to "shoot the bundle" in an effort to field a hustling ball team that would recapture some of the glamour that surrounded Maple Leaf teams in the past and restore interest in the game.

The first move they made was to locate Anthony Michael (Push'em-Up Tony) Lazzeri, one of the greatest "name players" of modern times, and offer him the job of managing the club. They found the great Tony in a receptive mood; he had come to the end of his illustrious playing career and was eager to make a new start as a manager.

The next move was to give the new manager some worth while material to work with. This they did by signing Heinie Manush, when Pittsburg turned the veteran slugger loose, and buying the contract of Mel Mazzera, a husky youngster who wields a powerful bat, from the St. Louis Browns. Looking around, they discovered that Carl Fischer was having trouble with Jack Ogden and Roger Hornsby down in Baltimore, and when the Birds dumped the left-hander's contract on the market they grabbed it in a hurry. Then they traded Mike Meola, a veteran pitcher who couldn't get going this spring, to Syracuse for catcher Tommy Heath, and sold outfielder Bobby Porter for a cash sum to the same club.

Thus the team, with its vastly changed roster, returned to Toronto and the club owners held their breath. Would the fans appreciate the effort they were making and respond to it? Would Lazzeri, in his new role as manager, be able to transmit any of the flaming spirit that had made him great as a player to his charges? Would Fischer be the trouble maker his critics claimed he was in Baltimore? Would Mazzera come through as a power hitter? These and similar questions troubled the minds of the owners as they sat back to watch developments.

Their first doubt — whether the fans would respond to the effort they were making to furnish a hustling ball team — was dissipated in, jig time when a huge crowd assembled under the stadium floodlights and acclaimed the team riotously as it trotted out on the field. But their fingers were still crossed because the opposition that night was the Rochester Red Wings, a club with no less than seven of its regulars hitting over .300 and four of its pitchers listed among the most effective hurlers in the league. If the Red Wings beat the Leafs decisively, which they might easily do, the fans might not come back for a second look.

Though the team took a commanding lead in the early innings and went on to win the game, the men behind the club did not relax. And even though both fans and sports writers agreed unanimously after the game that the team now had all the hustle and punch it formerly lacked, the owners were still a bit dubious. But the following night, the night the Leafs came from behind no less than four times to tie up and eventually win a thrilling 15-inning battle from the league leaders, the executives capitulated and went overboard in a body by confidently predicting a playoff spot for the team. For that night the club proved to the satisfaction of all that it had everything to make a contender: batting punch, a tight defence, managerial brains and, last but not least, a world of fight.

Thus the Leafs are back in the league and the most pleasing feature of it all is the manner in which they have been playing under Manager Lazzeri. Tony is accustomed to being with bright ball clubs. His years with the Yanks have taught him all there is to know about drive and hustle and strategy. Under his direction the Leafs are playing inspired baseball, cutting the corners like all get out and making every move count.

The fans, too, have caught the virus. They look for the Leafs to move into higher brackets any day now and they are doing their bit to get them there. They turn out in droves and they stay until the last man is out, because this is a team that is never licked. They have suddenly become audible again and the appearance of Lazzeri on the coaching line is all they need to set up the chant: "Come on, Tony! Push 'em up!"

Hector Pinkney, of Erin, shot a turkey buzzard which was destroying the hens on his farm. It is very unusual for this bird to be seen in this clime, usually coming no farther north than the state of Pennsylvania.

Schomberg stepped into first place in the district softball league Monday evening when they journeyed to Bolton and defeated the home team 8 to 4. It required an extra innings to settle the issue between these two top ranking teams, the score being tied 4 to 4 at the end of the regular game.

Tragedy accompanied the celebration of the stop of the King and Queen at Zephyr station on Tuesday, June 6th, when Dr. H. E. Johnson, of Mount Albert, summoned to assist an elderly man who had fainted during the heat and excitement, himself collapsed and died a few moments later, as a result of heart failure. He was 60 years of age.

Reeve Bates of Brampton is said to have resented hearing the intersection at Main and Queen streets being referred to as "the four corners" saying that it makes people think that they are living in hick town. We do not think that the reeve need worry much about that. Brampton citizens have never been afflicted greatly by "inferiority complex".
