How York County Farmers Can Help Defeat Hitler

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Canada's Minister of Agriculture Makes Suggestion As To Live Stock And Crops

A recommendation to every farmer in Canada to make a careful survey this fall of his farm project in view of the demands that the war may make necessary at any time is made in the following statement issued by Hon. Jas. G. Gardiner, Dominion Minister of Agriculture.

"The question of increased production requirements in Canada — what commodities will be required and in what quantities — is not an easy one to answer at this moment. The situation, however, may clarify itself with alarming suddenness, at which time a more definite policy would become possible.

Yet for the farmer this fall may prove to be the most significant fall season for many years. On the thoroughness of this fall's preparation will depend in a more vital way than ever before the quality, quantity, and cost of his final product a year hence — whether this takes the form of field crops marketed as such or of farm crops marketed through cattle, dairy products, sheep, wool, poultry products, or last, but far from least, hogs.

"Not for many years has there been an autumn when a most careful survey of the whole farm project may be more vitally important from national as well as self-protective considerations. We shall be too busy to do this next spring. It may be too late next fall.

"Three considerations deserve urgent and immediate attention:

Grain Crops and Feed

Crop plans for next year will govern the scope and character of this fall's operations. In Eastern Canada and British Columbia it may be well to insure adequate feed supplies for an intensive production of hogs or of dairy or poultry products. A few extra acres of grain on Eastern farms should therefore be seriously considered. Conversely, Prairie farmers will probably find that the marketing of surplus and low-grade wheat and coarse grains will net higher returns through hogs, cattle and poultry. Necessary modifications, additions, and changes in the work on the land this fall may yet be made to take care of the contemplated increases or changes in marketing.

Live Stock

This is one fall season when surplus* or unproductive or poor-type live stock has a special significance. During most fall seasons such stock must be marketed at sacrifice prices. At present price levels, however, animals falling into these classes can be liquidated at fair returns, and the opportunity thus presented should be grasped. In other words this is a good time to bring up the standard of herds and flocks, to reduce feed consumption and costs, and at the same time to obtain a return higher than can usually be counted upon when culling work is undertaken. A critical look at every beast on the farm at this time may pay interesting future dividends. On the other hand, the retaining of all good young stock of the right type, as for example extra good young sows and well-developed ewe lambs should not be neglected.

Seed Requirements

There will be time this winter for general seed-cleaning, a check-up on machinery and equipment, and the consideration of the many details connected with preparations for next season's crop. But of paramount importance is what happens on the farm in the next few weeks. Seed supplies generally are likely to be adequate. Certain disease-resistant sorts of wheat, oats and barley and disease-free seed potatoes, however, are still limited, and any substantial export of them would leave us short. Securing supplies of these well in advance this year is wise practice.

"It is also important that farmers should not change at this time from cheese to butter production. The uncertainty of the position in relation to the British market makes it impossible to advise as to price levels in either cheese or bacon but one thing is certain and that is that both cheese and bacon production will have an important bearing on Canada's food effort. We can be assured that when the matter is fully considered British and Allied consumers will give fair returns for essential products."
