Expert Describes Cleaning of Barley

First step is to remove as many awns as possible, says J. D. MacLeod — offers free pamphlet on "Reconditioning the fanning mill".

Some varieties of barley have awns which are difficult to remove during the threshing process. The same is true of tough barley, consequently the first essential when preparing to clean and grade barley for seed is to remove as many of the awns as possible, states John D. MacLeod, Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Ont. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

The chief objection to their presence on clean seed is that they retard the flow of grain through the fanning mill and the seeder. Scouring of seed will remove awns, permit the seed to flow evenly through the fanning mill and seeder and insure more uniform germination and a more uniform crop.

If a scourer is not available, advises Mr. MacLeod, the next best plan is to use a screen with a round perforation as a riddle. A screen with a 12/64, 13/64 or 14/64 round perforation has proven the best. In order to get through this round perforation the kernel must tip up. If the perforation is not large enough, each kernel to which an awn is attached must keep on moving until it eventually drops off the screen.

An oil-cloth laid on top of the riddle which will permit the grain to feed from the hopper underneath the cloth and on top of the riddle will keep awned kernels from tipping and will help in making a separation. This method has also proven helpful in removing oats from barley. It cannot be adopted, however, in the case of mills where the wind blows up through the riddle or top screen. Heavier feeding and greater pitch of riddle will also help in making such separations.

Barley will stand considerably more wind than will oats and sufficient wind should be applied to remove as many oat kernels as possible, also off type barley kernels.

Grading screens best for barley are 8 x 8 wires mesh; 8/64 and 9/64 zinc round.

Every farmer owning a fanning mill should write the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto, for the pamphlet "Reconditioning the fanning mill." There is no charge.

A letter to King township council, read at the session last Saturday commended that body for its action in keeping township roads open this winter. It was pointed out that this year over 175 miles have been kept ploughed out, whereas in other years only 20 miles were kept clear.

WILD ROSES

Together in the twilight we wandered through a wood; Our love as yet unspoken but deeply understood.

I plucked a tiny wild rose that graced the woodland glade And with the fragrant offering this vow to her I made:

"You know the meaning of a rose and dear one, if I could, For you I'd gather every wild rose blooming in this wood."

I placed the flower above her heart and bade that she retain This simple token of my love 'till we should meet again.

She knelt and from the rambling briar, a fair and budding flower She took in turn to pledge her love for me that twilight hour.

Together we picked roses to troth each other's heart; Then, on the ruthless winds of fate, we two were swept apart.

Between the pages of a book my wild rose now is pressed. I gaze with longing on the flower her tender hand caressed—

And oft I gather in my dreams, while stars gleam bright above, Wild roses by the million to bear unto my love.

—I. F. Moore.

Beauty Treatments Available At Home

Duro Softened Water will give you smooth, lovely hands, luxurious soft hair and a clear complexion. Lime and magnesium present in the water supply of most cities has a harmful effect. These elements prevent soap from being completely dissolved; soap curds form to clog the pores, harden the skin and adhere to the hair.

In Duro Softened Water less than one-quarter the quantity of soap used with hard water will create soft bubbly suds that rinse easily away. After bathing, shampooing or shaving in Softened Water, the skin is soft, the hair is fluffy and you have a really clean, fresh feeling. By having a attached to your water supply line in the basement, all lime and magnesium is removed.

Duro Water Softeners, made in sizes to suit every type of home, are priced from $65.00—and the installation cost is very low.
