Village Co-Operates In Salvage Collection

E. D. Cunningham, chairman of the Richmond Hill Salvage Committee with R. Walker Hall and Paul E. Angic, committee members interviewed members of the Municipal council Monday night and asked that the village co-operate in the salvage effort by designating one of the regular refuse collections, as a salvage collection. Reeve T. H. Trench and all members of council concurred in the suggestion and from now on the second Tuesday of each month there will be a collection of refuse and on the fourth Tuesday a collection of salvage. The regular collection of refuse will be next Tuesday, May 12. This is for all waste material usually taken in the municipal refuse collection which is not useful as salvage. The Salvage collections previously scheduled for the first and third Tuesday, will in future be held on the fourth Tuesday of every month, the next one being Tuesday, May 26th.

It was felt this was a very satisfactory arrangement, solving the transportation problem for the local salvage committee and placing no extra burden on the municipality. It simply means the town is converting one of its regular refuse collections into a salvage collection. Chairman E. D. Cunningham reviewed the progress of the Salvage Committee since its organization on March 20th and expressed satisfaction with the fine measure of co-operation extended by the members of the committee and the citizens generally.

The scripture lesson was read by Norma Lockyer and the Bible story given by Hazel Heeling. Tommy Adair received the offering and Jean Lippett gave the offertory prayer. A recitation was given by Margaret Eberhart and a vocal selection was sung by seven little girls. Wilma Adair contributed a piano solo. Georgina Plain gave a reading "A Thanksgiving Legend". Salvage Notes

For this week's salvage collection the use of the truck was donated by Little Bros. and it was driven by Sidney Leppard.

Many people still put bottles, tins, rags, rubber, etc. all in one container evidently unconscious of the fact that all these items must be sorted and put in different containers by the committee. If the rags and rubber were put in paper bags, the tins tied securely and the bottles put in a basket or carton it would greatly assist the collectors.

Some people have failed to read former suggestions as broken crockery is still mixed with salvage, and this is of no use but is rather a menace to the sorters.

This week the collectors left many things that had been put out for collection but were not of use as salvage. It is to be hoped that all citizens will again read over the lists of articles acceptable as salvage and will set out for collection only those articles that can be disposed of by the committee.

To those who find it difficult to flatten tins we would suggest a procedure used by a certain young housewife who is vitally interested in the salvage venture. She cuts the top all but about one half inch, empties the can, rinses it, then pushes the top inside. Then the can is inverted and the bottom cut out all but one half inch. The bottom is pushed inside and by stepping on it the tin is flattened, no end is lost and the lady has run no chance of cutting her finger.

Two local organizations have asked that the salvage committee share with them the proceeds of the salvage sold, yet not one member of either organization has volunteered to assist in the collection of the salvage, the sorting which takes hours of time, or the preparation for shipping and the actual loading of the trucks from Toronto. If either of these organizations had supplied volunteer workers who had been ready to give several days work in assisting the committee, the request to share in the receipts might have seemed more in order.
