Plowing Match Is Called Off

Although the international plowing match, scheduled for October, has been postponed, suburban and district matches will be held as usual, officials said today. A special meeting of the executive of the Ontario Plowmen's association this week announced postponement of the international match. At the same time they urged continuance of local matches.

This will be the second break in the series of annual international matches which commenced in 1913 with 32 entries and grew to the 1940 record match which had over 900 entries and an estimated attendance of 175,000. The first postponement of the match was in 1918 when it was called off on a week's notice during the influenza epidemic.

Decision to cancel this year's match was based on a desire to cooperate with the government in its conservation program, especially gasoline, tires and man-hours, directors said. "In township matches, gasoline and tires will not be used to any great extent as horses can be used for transportation," commented J. A. Carroll, general manager. "As they are one-day affairs there will be no appreciable loss of man-hours.

East York plowing match will be held as usual this fall, said William Clark, executive officer. The match is scheduled for the first Wednesday in November. The King & Vaughan plowing match, oldest match in York county, will be held this year, according to schedule, officers said, and it is expected the same will apply to the North York match.

Peel County Plowmen's association plan to hold their match in October, as scheduled, said E. A. Innes, agricultural representative.

"We haven't had a chance to meet to make any plans for our match because we are too busy on the farms," said J. E. Whitelock, agricultural representative for Halton county. He anticipated Halton County Plowmen's association would hold their annual match, as usual, in November.

Low Price Goods Will Stay In Production

War-time Prices and Trade Board Acts to Protect Consumers

Headaches are chronic these days. Generals have them and so have Prime Ministers. Producers have them and so do consumers. The cause can be found in the problem of supplies — supplies for the armed forces, supplies for munitions plants, supplies for manufacturers.

Until recently it looked as if this problem of supplies were going to give one of the nastier headaches to consumers — at least to those people living on low incomes. They were worried. If there were not going to be enough supplies to meet everyone's needs would the "little man" be the one to go without? But this month the War-time Prices and Trade Board came out with an emphatic "No". If it can do anything about it the "little man" is not going to take the rap any more than anyone else. In fact if anyone is going to get a break, he will be the one.

The Board is taking steps to see that at least some of the cheaper lines remain on the store shelves and that the quality of those goods is maintained so far as is possible.

From now on when industry is told to reduce the variety of its products — to cut its lines of goods from say, 25 to six, it will also be instructed to maintain lines at various price levels, in fact the tendency will be to cut down higher priced articles. This is being done to make sure that the six lines left to the manufacturer will not all be at high price levels.

The lack of supplies for manufacturers means that it will be increasingly difficult to produce certain types of goods, and it is likely that many may not be back on the market until the war is over. Some articles formerly could be obtained cheap because there were surplus stocks, but that is no longer the case. Many mass production factories were easily converted to war purposes and now are making gun parts instead of kitchen utensils or filling some other civilian need.

Then, too, officials point out, many cheap articles never were manufactured in Canada but were imported from Japan or Central Europe and these, of course, are off store shelves for the duration.

A bad sport is usually a man acting natural.

Salvage Notes

The thanks of the salvage committee is tendered the Jones Coal Co. for their assistance in collecting salvage last Monday.

The Dominion salvage supervisor is asking now particularly for rubber, fats and bones. Fats are needed in making munitions. The next collection will be on August 10. The committee would appreciate receiving all fats ready for salvage on that date.

The committee have on hand a good used Happy Thought range which they will exchange for $2.00 and an old stove of equal weight. There is also available a large electric stove in good condition though used for some years. This would be a stove suitable for a summer cottage where electric current may be secured.

Since April 20th over 26 tons of salvage have been shipped from the local rooms.

WHAT TOOTH PASTE TUBES WILL DO

Those crumpled tubes that once contained tooth paste, shaving cream or other preparation, and which we heedlessly tossed aside, now command our respect. If we continue to treat them with disrespect they may be the cause of our being fined or even worse may happen. If we escape detection we are liable to suffer the barbs of a guilty conscience, for it is against the law to destroy or throw away any used collapsible tube. We must carefully save them and carry them to a retail drug store, cigar store, general or department store where suitable receptacles are provided. These now important bits of metal will go from collecting depots to the smelters under the direction of the Wartime Salvage Limited.

These tubes have served us once but will do so again if we let them. They will help fight our battles. Consider what one tube will do. It will supply enough tin to line the water bottles of twenty soldiers; one tube will plate twenty water canteens; one tube will supply vital parts for twenty shell cases. A number of them will do even more—60 tubes provide all the tin necessary for solder in the electrical connections of a Flying Fortress.

Nearly three-quarters of a million pounds of tin went into the manufacture of over thirty-one million tubes last year. Even if a third of these have already been destroyed there remains an estimated half million pounds which can be salvaged. Multiply the service which can be rendered by one tube by the twenty tubes resting on milady's dressing table, on the shelves of medicine cabinets, and elsewhere in Canada, and there must surely come a realization of why these metal containers must be salvaged.

There is no tin produced in Canada, and through the loss of Malaya and the Netherlands East Indies our basic supply has been cut off. The urgent need of tin cannot be too strongly stressed. It is used in the making of Bren guns, tanks, bronze bearings, high pressure valves on planes, electrical equipment for aircraft, and in other ways.

If we do not salvage these collapsible tubes something is going to happen to us, and we will not like it.

TAX-FREE PIGLETS

A Newfoundland Customs Notice of June 30, 1942, decrees that young pigs under three months of age are now exempt from the revenue war tax of 7½ per cent ad valorem and are also exempt from ordinary Customs duty on importation into Newfoundland.
