AT CHRISTMAS

Thou who didst give Thy only Son,
That precious gift of priceless worth,
Have pity on all fathers now,
Whose sons died for a better earth.
Mary, who kissed soft baby feet,
Thy comfort give to mothers sad,
Whose empty arms will always yearn
To hold the missing soldier lad.
Oh, Christ, who knew an earthly home,
Stay close beside each fine, brave son,
Whether on sea, on land, in air,
In Thy kind keeping guard each one.

The editor's mail this week included welcome letters from three Richmond Hill boys now in far separated points, Sgt. D. W. "Dick" Mills, Pte. John Stong and Randolph Phinney. Sgt. "Dick" Mills is at Dundurn, Sask. and says he is fine and enjoying a real western winter with the thermometer hitting "thirty below" last week. "The West isn't bad," says "Dick", "but Richmond Hill will sure look good to me next time I see it." Pte. John Stong is with the L. & R. Scottish Regiment in Nova Scotia and like "Dick" and all other Richmond Hill boys enjoys receiving the home paper every week. "It's like a bit of heaven," he says, "to sit down and read about the home town in The Liberal." He often sees Fred Taylor who is stationed at the same Camp. "Randy" Phinney is with the R.C.M.P. and is stationed now at Foam Lake, Sask. It has a population of about 600 and is headquarters for the R.C.M.P. detachment which polices an area of 25000 square miles. There are two others besides Rand in the Foam Lake Detachment so we believe him when he says he is busy. All boys sent kindest regards and Christmas greetings to Richmond Hill friends.

HITCH HIKER

It's strange how empty cars can pass

A soldier on the road,
As patiently he stands and waits,
His kit bag quite a load.

I've seen them in the driving rain
While cars went whirling by Indifferently, unheeding of
The lad's outspoken cry.

I've often wondered what they think,
These boys in brown or blue,
Who left their homes and friends behind

To fight for me and you.
They must resent the selfishness
Of these indifferent men;
But all they do is shrug and smile
And lift a thumb again

Till finally a car slows down
And opens wide the door:
The occupants are loaded, but—
"We've always room for more!"

It's strange how empty cars can pass
These lads, and never see
The application of the Word:
"You've done it unto me."
