Barnyard Notes

Before York County Council adjourned for the year a resolution was unanimously carried which issued thanks to those living in the cities, towns and villages who turned out to help farmers with their harvest last summer. Here is the wording of the resolution:

"Resolved that the Council of the Corporation of the County of York in regular session extend to the Councils, industrial companies and private individuals of the City of Toronto and other urban municipalities the thanks of the farmers of the County of York for the most timely assistance rendered by employees and residents as Farm Commandos in harvesting the exceptionally heavy crop of 1942 which could not have been saved with the limited farm help available."

At present in Canada, the bacon hog and the Wiltshire side are major products. The first shipments of Wiltshire bacon from Canada occurred about 60 years ago, but for more than 30 years the pig for pork has dominated Canada's swine production—Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Dominion Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

It was said many times in the last war that food would win it and the records show that food was a telling factor in the enemies' defeat. It is said in this way that food will win the war and the peace. Food alone will do neither, but, without the necessary food, no other combination can do either.—Dr. G. H. Barton.

Farm accounts form a permanent record of the business transactions involved in the yearly operation of the farm. In order to assist the farmer in keeping such a record, the King's Printer, Ottawa, has available a simple and useful little account book. It covers all farm operations, and at the same time does not incur a special knowledge of expert accountancy. This account book is entitled "Farm Account Book" and may be obtained at the nominal price of 10 cents.

According to the last official report of the 1942 season, the Canadian apple crop is now set at 4,210,000 barrels, an increase of 18 per cent on the 1941 crop, but 13 per cent below the five-year (1936-40) average of 4,813,800 barrels.

A diminution of tea supplies to North America has called attention to the South American evergreen tree, Mate, which has been used for centuries in that continent as a beverage. Like tea it has a somewhat bitter taste, a liking for which has to be acquired.

The cooler, moisture climate of the Maritimes is the factor above all which gives that area pre-eminence over many sections of Ontario in the yield of potatoes. On the other hand, the warmer, drier climate of Western Ontario is move favorable to the growth of corn, alfalfa, fall wheat, and other crops.

Several months' storage in the crib after husking are required to reduce the moisture content of 20 to 35 per cent in the corn to 12 to 17 per cent. At this stage of dryness, the corn may be shelled and stored safely in bins.

The presence of anaemia through want of iron in young pigs is usually first recognized by sudden whitening of the ears. This is particularly striking in the Yorkshire and other white breeds. Even when the sow is fed large doses of iron, there is not sufficient of it in her milk to satisfy the requirements of nursing pigs. Therefore, unless the young pigs can obtain iron from other sources, their ability to form normal blood is lost.

Good stable hygiene is an important factor in the control of mastitis in dairy cows. The hygiene includes general cleanliness of stables and gutters and housing in well-bedded stalls with proper partitions to prevent teat injuries. Exposure of the udder to cold should be carefully avoided at all times.

Frost injury to wheat is apparent by a wrinkled or shrunken appearance but is not indicated in oats or barley by outside appearance.

Water for hens is a vital necessity. A hen drinks about twice as much water per unit of body weight and will die more quickly from want of water than any other farm animal. A hen producing 130 to 150 eggs per year will consume nearly 20 gallons of water.

By careful selection, farm animals have been developed into highly specialized creatures for the conversion of feed into such products as meat, milk, eggs and wool. Consequently it is necessary that the animals' rations should contain the essential food requirements in proper balance and in palatable form.

The horse in its relation to man differs from all other farm animals in that it produces energy, not food. This fact alone explains to some degree the greater prevalence of disease in horses and the necessity of recognizing the proper relation of feeding to the amount of work done.

The largest crop of grapes on record in Canada has been successfully harvested and marketed, at an estimate of 74,834,000 pounds, or 59 per cent greater than the 1941 crop, and 69 per cent above the five-year (1936-40) average of 44,319,300 pounds.

For Those Who Carry Lunches

Here are some tips. Don't bring the same old standbys day after day. Make your lunches interesting, appetizing, the kind that build up your health, too.

Food experts in Nutrition Services at Ottawa say that a lunch-box should always contain three different types of food. First, a substantial protein, like sandwiches filled with meat or eggs or cheese. Second, a fruit or vegetable (other than potatoes) to give you minerals and vitamins. And third, milk, in some form, because it gives you more food value than anything else and is absolutely essential for strong bones and teeth.

If you like sandwich fillings that are a little different, try some of these: grated cheese with peanut butter, cottage cheese with red jelly, chopped dried fruits with salad dressing, finely minced liver with mustard and minced onion, mashed left-over baked beans with chopped celery and pickle. And remember, whole wheat bread or Canada Approved bread contains a lot more vitamins than ordinary white.

Raw vegetables can often be just as appetizing as raw fruits. Have you tried crisp sticks of celery, thin sticks of carrot or turnip, leaves of fresh lettuce wrapped in wax paper?

Milk can easily be worked into any meal by drinking it "straight" or by filling your thermos with cream soup, cocoa, or coffee made with half milk.
