

With The Veterans

Our entertainment committee along with the Ladies' Auxiliary met Tuesday night and decided to run a Euchre on Monday, March 22, if we can secure the Hall. Total proceeds will go for soldiers' comforts. Please bear this in mind and full particulars will appear in your next week's issue of The Liberal.

To those who saw that lone figure Monday morning on Mill St., shovelling snow, our scouts advise that it was Comrade Reeve Johnny Greene digging out the drifts so Dr. Wilson could get through to see Comrade Butler who is still confined to bed. What next will our Reeve be doing to help the Veterans?

In last week's Liberal, one of our new Comrade's names appeared as Comrade Jack Gordon. This should have read Comrade Jack Jordan. (Excuse me).

Those wandering "Vets" Paterson and Masters' stay in Windsor was cut short. They are now at Petawawa. Was it too many crossings of the border, fellows?

Sgt. Major Andrews is now in Windsor. Maybe that is the reason for the move of the above mentioned. Comrade Andrews is expected home this Friday for a week-end leave.

Sgt. J. Donaldson, another "Vet" is posted at Espanola. How these "Vets" see the country.

We are all wondering how those two old Elgin Mills "Vets" Heeley and Evelyn have stood the grind this winter. It must be true that "Old soldiers never die".

We will publish our Ladies' Auxiliary report in next week's issue.

Best of luck and quick recovery to our boys on the sick parade.

HOBBIES

INTERESTING THINGS THAT PEOPLE IN OUR DISTRICT ARE DOING

If you visited the Red Cross Handicraft Show in Thornhill last June you probably noticed two interesting stools with bases carved in the form of elephants. These were designed and made by Mr. Hal Watson of Thornhill, who in business hours, writes, and sometimes draws the cartoons for advertisements.

When asked if he did much wood carving Mr. Watson said "no", that he just happened to be passing when an Oak tree was being cut down, and bought two thick slices of the trunk to see what he could make with them. However, a little further conversation drew out the fact that he had built a cabin trailer.

It seems that back in 1932 Mr. Watson was walking out of a city parking lot when he noticed a particularly light and attractive looking trailer. It was unoccupied so he could not resist the chance to peep through the window. A toy sail boat lay on the table, two big hoops such as English children roll leaned against the wall and the whole interior breathed such an atmosphere of comfort and happiness that he was seized with the desire to have just such a trailer for his own family. A plate on the outside bore the name of the "London Coach Co." so he wrote to England for a catalogue and learned that this caravan (as they are called in the old country) was the only one of its kind in Canada, and belonged to the company's agent who was making a coast to coast tour.

Though the price of a similar one—£500 (or roughly $2,500) was prohibitive he was reluctant to give up the idea, and after thinking and planning for about two years he started to build one himself.

Securing two wheels and an axle, he began by making a platform of Oak beams, floored with plywood. On this he erected the skeleton frame, the outside of which was covered first with plywood and then with a layer of cotton batting—the latter giving both insulation and nicely rounded contours. Canvas was then stretched over the cotton batting on the top half of the trailer, and weather proofed with aluminum paint. The bottom half was covered with a good looking maroon leatherette.

Inside, the cabin is lined with varnished plywood in natural fir finish, and always presents a very clean, bright appearance. There are six windows, one door and a roof ventilator which operates like a skylight.

Within the small compass of the efficiently planned interior there is sleeping accommodation for four and six can dine in comfort. Other conveniences include an electric lighting system, a bathroom with a small bath tub, counter sunk in the floor (and covered with a trap door), 15 gallon water storage tank, sink, refrigerator, a stove for cooking, and also one for heating on chilly days, and plenty of cupboard space.

As the holiday season drew near and he was pressed for time, Mr. Watson enlisted the aid of a trailer manufacturer who had stocks of such hardware and fittings as were necessary to complete the job.

When fully loaded the trailer weighs less than one ton which means only $3.00 for a license fee as compared with the $10.00 required for a heavier model.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson, their two children and the family dog have spent many happy weeks in their "home on wheels". Though they have parked in trailer camps they much prefer less frequented spots, and for several years they rented a beach on the Georgian Bay. While there Mr. Watson amused himself by carving and colouring a likeness of each member of his family including the
