A Tree for Tunis

By Lance Corporal Harry Jarvis
 Tomorrow is "Arbor Day". What more fitting monument could we erect in memory of that great victory than the planting of a tree. So be it.

Considering trees from a transplanting point of view, they fall into three classes. First the evergreens or conifers, next the deciduous trees, and as a subdivision of the latter class, the nut-bearing trees. Each class has at least one fussy little idiosyncrasy that must be respected, and each and every one demands the observance of certain rites and ceremonies.

A tree once overheard a silly human being say: "If you get your feet wet you catch cold and die." Whereupon the wise old tree answered: "If I get my feet DRY, I'll die." And that is the main secret in tree transplanting—DON'T LET THE ROOTS DRY OUT (and this applies particularly to the conifers).

In the distant long ago when the good God fashioned a tree, He provided a certain number of roots to supply the needs of the above-ground structure. And no matter how carefully we go about transplanting we are bound to destroy some of the roots. Therefore to restore the balance of nature we must cut off some of the branches—"at least a third" is a good rule to follow (and that is another secret).

This rule applies more particularly to the deciduous trees—such as Elm, Maple, Ash, etc. The roots of this type of tree are spreading, and there is more destruction of the root system in transplanting. In pruning do not cut off the "leader" or top of the tree, but rather, cut back the side branches.

The conifers—the Pines, Spruces, Cedars, etc.—are fibrous rooted; a lot of fine roots within a comparatively small space. Very little, if any, pruning is necessary with this type of tree. It may be trimmed if desirable (and here let me repeat and repeat—KEEP THE ROOTS WET!).

The nut trees, which include the Oaks, send a tap root down to China—that's why the trees there grow upside down (or so they tell me). Anyway this tap root goes down a scandalous distance, and of course it must be cut when transplanting a tree of this type. This root has to be replaced, and during the process very little other growth is made. It does not really pay, therefore to transplant a nut tree of much over a foot or so in height. It can be done, of course.

Trees should not be planted deeper—or shallower—than they were in their original position. If planted too deeply the tree will smother; and if too shallow it will dry out quicker, and waste time sending its roots down to the proper level.

The above does not apply however, to the Cedar. This tree may be planted to almost any depth. I have piled earth round a thirty foot Cedar to a height of ten feet and it liked it. This treatment would kill another tree in short order. (The reason for this is that the Cedar will form new roots at the surface of the ground). A Cedar hedge, whose lower branches have died, may be banked or terraced up to the living branches; or may be dug up and replanted deeper.

After transplanting any tree, the ground should be kept well mulched and moist—NOT WET—or you'll drown the pore beast.

Here are a few important points to be remembered in transplanting any tree. I have kept them till the last for emphasis (or perhaps I forgot about them till the last moment). Make the hole large enough, so as not to cramp the roots, and pulverize the ground at the bottom of the hole. Spread the roots out carefully. Put in a little earth and work it well in among the roots. As you fill the hole, tramp the earth down firmly. Use plenty of water. And good luck to you.

Day 139 Evenings 82w

With The Veterans

One of the largest turnouts of the year was on hand at our monthly meeting to greet three guests, Reeve Greene, Lieut. Rodgman and Sgt. Jones. Lieut. Rodgman and Sgt. Jones gave very interesting and instructive talks on what the Veterans Guard of Canada are doing in guarding the thousands of prisoners of war now in Canada. We expect that their hands will be full when they receive the hundreds of thousands now being cleaned out of North Africa. Any of you old timers who can say with a straight face that you are under fifty-five and in Category C or better who would like to have the pleasure of guarding some of these desert rats should get in touch with our secretary who has full particulars of how, when and where to collect their service uniforms. Reeve Greene gave an interesting talk on the "Back the Attack" War Loan. We trust that it will not be long before we have the pleasure of another visit.

We had a very successful euchre last Thursday with everyone enjoying themselves. The winners—Ladies, Mrs. Deadman, Mrs. Ransom, Mrs. Warwick; men, Mr. Brazier, Mr. Horrell, Mr. Warwick. Door prizes, Miss Beatty, Mr. Warwick. Travelling prizes, Mr. Fox, Mr. Russell. We want to thank all those friends who helped in the success of our two euchres, enabling us to carry on the parcels and cigarettes to the boys overseas.

Our sick parade is improving. Comrade Bennett appeared at our last meeting to surprise the boys. He is not himself as yet but is coming along. Comrade Butler, with a few more sunny days like last Sunday will lose his pains. He is back to work.

Lance Corporal Chester Unger, Corporal Bili Bone and L.A.C. Elgin Barrow were in town on leave for a few days. We trust that their short stay was enjoyable.

Thanks Comrade Masters for your cigarette contribution. It realized around five dollars.

Remember next meeting will be a busy one. Make sure to keep it open, Tuesday, June 1st.

God Save the King!
