EXPONENT OF CANADIAN NEUTRALITY C.C.F. CANDIDATE IN EAST YORK

Back in 1937, when the war clouds were gathering, Agnes Macphail, who had represented Grey-Bruce at Ottawa since 1921, was very definite in her opposition to Canada being dragged into any international complications as part of the British Commonwealth of Nations. She described herself as an "isolationist with a North American point of view." If everyone thought as she did, she declared, Canada would not plunge into war at all.

Her attitude then was a further development of the crusade she opened almost with her entry into Parliament — a crusade which had for its aim the abolition of cadet training in Canada. Year after year she moved that the modest appropriation placed in the estimates for this purpose should be reduced to the sum of $1. "It is poor mental training," she said, "and I believe that the only kind of discipline that is of any use is self-discipline rather than the kind which comes from the commands that are barked out." On another occasion she said, "If we are to have physical training there is no reason why we should take one part of the human race and train it to be physically fit leaving the other untrained. I shall continue to move that it be reduced until some day we will come to that conclusion."

Defense estimates also came under criticism from Miss Macphail. She was opposed to providing for the contingency of Canadian forces operating outside Canada. If money was to be voted for defense it should be expended on coast defenses and other military needs within Canada. And it was in 1937, when the apprehension of war was daily growing, that Miss Macphail said from her place in Parliament, "In Canada we ought to be doing everything possible in preparation to maintain a neutral position."

Grey-Bruce, which she had carried in five elections, decided in the election of 1940 that she was not the representative it wanted. Grey-Bruce is not isolationist with a North American point of view. It was misrepresented by its member when she said that Canada should be doing everything possible to maintain a neutral position in the struggle between Hitlerism and democracy. In the 1940 election in Grey-Bruce, Miss Macphail ran third in a three-cornered fight. Her vote was 1,628 less than that of the Liberal who displaced her.

Miss Macphail does not contemplate returning to Grey-Bruce to endeavour to secure re-entry to public life. Instead she has come to carry the C.C.F. banner in East York. It is for East York to say whether it would be appropriately represented in the Ontario Legislature by an isolationist with a North American point of view, by a lady who thinks it was possible for Canada to remain neutral in the present struggle. —Evening Telegram.

MUST STAMP CARCASSES

The official stamps for marking carcasses of cattle, calves, hogs, sheep and lambs under the livestock slaughtering regulations of the War-time Prices and Trade Board are now being distributed without charge to the licensed slaughterers entitled to them.

The stamping system, an important adjunct of the rationing of meat now in effect, will become effective on July 12. After that date no carcass may be sold without the official stamp appearing the required number of times on it.

28th Annual Meeting Section IV

A report submitted by Mrs. S. W. Hirtle, secretary of Section IV W.M.S. Presbyterian branch reveals the nature and quality of the 28th annual meeting held recently at Newmarket Presbyterian Church. Extending to West King, Sutton, south to Richmond Hill, a good representation came from all auxiliaries included.

Mrs. Hirtle was appointed secretary. Richmond Hill invited the Section to hold the 1944 meeting there. The Mission Band Rally has been cancelled for next year, transportation affecting same.

The Presbyterian president presented the Provincial meeting report of 1943, noting that the financial report is the best since 1932 with a definite increase in givings in Presbyterians while 16 met allocations. The Mission Band raised $3,840.82 from a membership of 6,110, while Life Membership certificates and seals showed increase. An increase of 102 Glad Tidings was shown.

Reviewing old and new W.M.S. work, arising from the time conditions, Mrs. Hall conveyed the provincial address in their fullness of responsibility and progress.

In his address on "The World at Work in a World of War," Dr. W. A. Cameron, General Secretary of Board of Missions, stated that Mission work has not been defeated but has received only a temporary setback. After the war is over with the probable return to Formosa and Manchuria to China, a day of great opportunity will dawn for christian missions. Dwelling on other fields in similar optimistic manner he concluded with a strong appeal for sustained and consecrated effort for maintaining our present fields of labour, to be ready to meet the spiritual needs of the world after peace has come.

Space does not permit further account, but suffice to say present war conditions have served to urge and inspire the work, they have doubtless served to inspire attendance and quality of thought of the 28th annual.

With The Veterans

Just a reminder in regards to our annual picnic to Hanlan's Point on August 12. The writer understands that the tickets now being sold are in good demand. We would ask all those having tickets, either the Women's Auxiliary or the men's branch to make their returns to their convenors as soon as possible and if not convenient, not later than our next monthly meeting which will be held Tuesday, August 3rd. This will give us a good idea of the number intending to go and enable us to charter the number of special cars necessary.

At this month's meeting our vice-president, Jack Varley, was in the chair and he had the pleasure of initiating two new Comrades, Comrades Peet and Thompson. The hand of welcome is out for any other old timers or to the men returning from this war.

Comrade McGrath, who joined up and went overseas early this war and after spending eighteen months over there, was discharged on account of disability, has again regained his health and is now a member of the R.C.A.F. Best of luck, Mac.

Comrade Corp. Harry Sayers has finished his home-coming leave after returning from England and is now posted as an instructor at Clinton, Ont.

Those two old warriors, Comrades Masters and Andrews are spending a few days at their homes. They claim that the Victory gardens they put in when they were down last time have been overshadowed by weeds and it was necessary for them to make this long trip to save their victory crop.

Our sick parade, Comrades Austin and Bennett have not been up to scratch lately and would enjoy a visit from their comrades.

Do not forget the sale of the tickets for the picnic and we would like to see many of our friends outside the organization accompany us and we can assure them of a very pleasant day.

God Save the King.

Another trouble about the man who thinks he has winning ways is that one can't win all the time.
