A card addressed to Mrs. W. Pitchforth was received last week from K. Halliburton, Lazonby, Cumberland, England. It was to thank her for some knitted articles.

Mrs. Pitchforth died last September, but her daughters believe that the articles mentioned were some of those made by their mother for the British War Victims. Though confined to her bed for twenty-three years, the late Mrs. Pitchforth did a great deal of knitting during the war for friends and relatives in the services, and also for the Red Cross and other worthy war efforts. She often used to tuck a note in a sock or sweater that was destined for some stranger.
