Sally Lloyd and her Musical Mates played. King Association provided the park space and lighting, as well as other facilities and the dance floor belonging to Laskay had been retained after

King street dance for this occasion. Laskay Association convened arrangements, and assisted with booths and refreshments. George Brown, vice president of King Athletic and Fergus-Lawson of the Laskay group called for square dances, and George Agar, president of King Association and Charles Black, president of Laskay Association pitched in to help along with the rest. Eileen Williams has been ill for more than three months, spending much of the time in a Toronto hospital where surgical operations were performed. King Township Building By-Law

A building by-law has gone into effect throughout King township, and Mr. Charles Ross, King R. 2, has been made building inspector. After deliberation King township council decided to enforce restrictions comparable to law effected in other municipalities. The by-law is set up for regulating the erection of and providing for safety of buildings in the municipality. Permits must be obtained from Mr. Ross for erection, alteration, enlargement, removal or reconstruction of any building within the township of King. This clause does not apply to buildings erected on farms or land used for farms, provided only one residence be so erected. Breach of any part of the by-law provisions will be based on a fine not exceeding $50 for each offence, subject to discretion of the convicting magistrate.

Miss Marjorie Jarvis has returned from Lake Joseph, Muskoka district and with her sisters, Misses Stephanie and Julia Jarvis spent last week end with friends at Coldwater.

Considerable interest has been caused by the apt description and pictures of Ballycrooy, the hand-hewn log house belonging to Mrs. Eric Johnston, 4th concession King Township, shown in the July issue of Canadian Homes and Gardens. The place is a work of art, substantial, comfortable and inviting, with furnishings and all appointments strictly in keeping with the historical antiquity and harmonious setting of the dwelling. Homes Served For Water Supply

Approximately 60 per cent village householders are being hooked up to waterworks mains by James J. Wall, Yonge Street at Oak Ridges. The village contract was let to Mr. Wall, who entered into individual contracts on corresponding basis of cost. All work is being tested by Mr. Wall who has employed about four men to do the work. These households will be able to use water from mains on completion of stand tank. Mr. Wall has an extensive knowledge of this work, having been in plumbing and heating business for some years. He employs 12 men and has extended his lines to other services. His father has been in similar business for more than 40 years.

Construction of homes is gaining headway in King Village. The Judd house is progressing, Mrs. Judd having worked extensively on the house. In her own right she is a first class carpenter. Harold Kirby's house, Jas. and Lester Brown, houses, and west are George Billings, Geo. Armitage houses well on the way, while Stanley Hunter's house is getting on. Hugh Ross and son, Jim, are building a commodious home next to Alfred Bayliss property. Bert Kelley's house will look attractive. Improvement to the Ralph Gillies place, the original Gillies farm home, is worth note, and a peep beyond the roadside fence reveals smooth lawns and flower beds. The detached unit of this house comprising a neat bungalow and built across the highway is now for sale. The return of Alex Campbell to King should be inspiration to other war veterans to build in their native town. Alex and his wife have purchased building property and while a temporary structure will house them for a brief time, their permanent house will be started later. Mr. Iredale's house will be ready for use before too long. The Herman Dennison house has a fine appearance. Landscaping to the Harry McBride property presents a pretty picture to the driven-in sideroad to King village.
