GUILD GOSSIP

By Glad McLatchy
Just like a hive of bees buzzing about their business, so the members of the Evening Guild buzzed in earnest about business of immediate and future importance.

To stop momentarily to listen to a room full of females with tongues wagging in perpetual motion, is like attending a symphony of wind instruments only. At first a subtle, if not tantalizing breeze envelopes the air, which gradually reaches bombastic proportions and then, the baton, (or mallet) with decisive stroke, changes the tempo into a serenity of calm, and we realize once more that bees don't live in Bedlam, they live in harmony, just like the Guild.

Business first, then pleasure, a maxim old and wise, how foolish not to treasure time which so quickly flies, and how he flew from knee to knee almost knocking the caps off when the program called for impromptu speeches, etc., etc.

But it was very educational to say the least, as either a good listener or speaker as it befell our duty and we must admit, that we learned a great deal from the human treatment of the subjects thus chosen.

What with roaming along the keyboard with Ros (spelled ROSALIND) jeepin' jiving with Jessie and the voun'uns, and ending up on a spending spree with Clara's millions, was a never to be forgotten night, and worthy of the thanks to three good sports, by three good sports, Jean, Ruth and Mrs. A.

Now be prompted about the next meeting on November 2, same place and time as usual.
