GUILD GOSSIP
(By Glad McLatchy)

If Old Father Time could just have peeped in on the Guild last Tuesday, he would have fallen in love with several strikingly beautiful women. For it was "Grandmother Nite," and every one looked grand, titivated up in frills, feathers, and furbelows, which belonged to somebody's Grandmother.
'Tis true, that fine feathers make fine birds, and how birdlike we women really can be, was especially noticeable the other night, as we strutted and preened like the proudest peacock (or peahen in this case) or swished ourselves about like a fan-tailed pigeon, and judging by the 'fan' perhaps the word should be 'carrier' pigeon, and of course, the homey little chicken is ever present, (sounds more alluring than 'hen' anytime, where women are congregated).

The hats that Scrivvy and Rena wore were most becoming, a little on the large size and while it was not generally known, some of us were on the alert in case these two valuable members, suddenly disappeared under the weight of the taffeta and felt creations. Both were equal in size to a vegetable hamper, and either one could have concealed the so-called Grandmothers.
Other wearing apparel besides hats were well weighted, like the gorgeously beaded caps that Jean wore, and the boned neck that was hugging someone was a choker indeed, and we wondered then as we wonder now if a thing of beauty is a joy forever, for the only garment in evidence that still is a joy forever, was a chummy nightgown worn by Ruth and Olive and which received honourable mention from the learned judge, who saw fit to award first prize to our Honourary President, and also to Scrivvy our "working" president.
"Grandmother Nite" will long be remembered as one of the grandest nights enjoyed by the Guild, mainly because you and you and you were such grand sports to support the committee who plans these evenings for you and because Mrs. Garfield Yerex and charming daughter, Lucy helped to make the program complete by lending the musical touch and doling a fine job of judging.

Concert Nite is next Tuesday, don't forget you are responsible for bringing someone else to enjoy this evening with us.

MASTER FEEDING PROGRAM

Several systems have been tested in feeding the laying flock to develop the most effective feeding program. For heavy, consistent and economical egg production over a longer period, there is no other system at the present time to equal —

RED HEAD EGG MASH, a good SCRATCH GRAIN and a supplementary feeding of MASTER LAYING PELLETS at noon.

THE MASTER FEEDING PROGRAM fits into your management schedule with a flexibility which gives the feeder at all seasons of the year, a greater control over the performance of his flock.
