OLD HOME WEEK

We have just had an Old Home Week celebration in our village. Old timers came from distant places and quite a few saw each other for the first time in forty and even fifty years. It has been for many, a very delightful occasion.

I wasn't born and raised in this village but I was almost as thrilled as those who were. Everybody was so good-natured and the fellowship was something to remember. "I just had to come," said an old fellow, "if only to see how the girls turned out that I used to kiss at the Christmas parties."

There was a lot of fun about waistlines that disappeared. Girls that once were trim and slim had fought a battle against corpulence — and lost. They had just given up the struggle and become resigned. One dear lady — who told me she tipped the scales at two hundred and fifty pounds, said: "Believe it or not, when I was married I was just over one hundred and ten!"

A remark that interested me was made about an old fellow who had been out west for nearly fifty years. A friend was talking about him: "Well, Jim is the same old Jim — only more so."

I imagine that is what had happened in most cases. They were the same people — only more so. We are like trees that grow as they are planted. Our virtues, if we have any, grow and become fixed, and whatever vices we have, also become habitual. As the psychologists say: our brain grooves become deeper.

I read recently an article by an elderly man, who had attended a reunion where he saw friends he had forgotten about. He wrote: "I did not know whether to laugh or cry. There they were, friends of nearly half a century ago, some of them wearing old hats and ties that had been laid aside for years. The hats seemed smaller because heads were larger. The plumage was gay, and the merriment extravagant, but I felt a little sad."

It is not difficult to understand that frame of mind. At the same time it is true that one of the distinctive notes of Christian religion is its assurance that life becomes better as we proceed. It was Paul the aged who wrote: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

In the main, Old Home Week left me with the impression that the old timers were a cheerful lot with abundance of good will and toleration. In ancient times old age was something to fear. Even the wisest in those days accepted the common belief that old people could have little interest and enjoyment. This idea is passing, and it ought to pass.

It is well-known that old violins produce the sweetest music; the instrument's stiffness has given place to smoothness and ease. The superiority of an old instrument is soon recognized. Old folks are like old violins. The years have brought a sweetness and mellowness and an absence of discord. In any case, it seems to me, that the most winsome and attractive people I know are those whose long experience has enriched them with many glorious qualities.

We are never old so long as we are genuinely interested in what is going on. "It is enthusiasm for something that makes life worth living," said Oliver Wendell Holmes. I am thinking of two old men, both famous, but widely different in their outlook. First, the German statesman, Bismark. In later years he became satiated and fed-up. "I am not sick," he wrote, "but I am weary. Nothing gives me any pleasure. I have no interest in anything; even politics bore me."

His contemporary was the British statesman, Gladstone, who lived to a ripe old age. To the very end he was full of enthusiasm for good causes, and these interests kept him happy and eager. In John Morley's three volume life of Gladstone, the second and third volumes were devoted to his achievements when over sixty.

Charles Lamb was in love with life and never bored. He said: "I am not content to pass away like a weaver's shuttle. I am in love with this green earth. I do not want to be weaned by age and drop off like mellow fruit. I want to be useful and happy."

As for the future, we can leave it with him in whose keeping are all our tomorrows.

To-day's quotation is by Samuel Smiles: "To view things cheerfully and hopefully is a habit that can be made to grow like any other habit."

GORMLEY

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Heise on the birth of a daughter.

Mr. J. Stevens visited last Thursday with Mr. Robert Francy.

Mrs. Mable Hoover and Lawrence of Kitchener visited among relatives here over last week-end.

Mrs. E. Hunt and Mrs. Charlie Hoover spent last week end with Marian and Blanche in Kitchener.

Last Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Bond, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. S. Doner and Mrs. C. Doner were entertained by Mrs. Ted Wagg of Cashel at a quilting.

We are very happy to congratulate Mrs. John Forrester who has now passed her eighty-ninth birthday. Last Monday a number of her friends were present to celebrate the occasion.

We are very pleased that Mrs. T. Moorby was well enough to return from the Brierbush Hospital last Friday.

Also Mr. Perry Edwards was brought home Friday morning and will be a patient in Sunny Acres Rest Home for some time.

Last Friday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Doner and family had supper with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Barrett and family. Later in the evening about seventy-five friends gathered as a surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Doner. They were presented with a tri-light floor lamp, a coffee table and a hassock. The Doner family moved this Wednesday to Dixon Hill and our best wishes go with them. Mr. Doner has accepted a Rawleigh route in Scarborough township.

Keen in mind the Day of Prayer this Friday in Victoria Square United Church. All are welcome.

This year the Red Cross Must have More Money*

More call for Red Cross

The Red Cross must be prepared for all eventualities. Year after year the demand for Red Cross services grows. Millions of dollars have been spent in flood, fire and other disasters, in aiding the stricken and homeless.

More Outpost Hospitals

Throughout Canada, the Red Cross operates 75 Outpost Hospitals and 2 Crippled Children's Hospitals. More are being built and more are needed. Last year over 70,000 patients were served by Outpost Hospitals.

More Blood Donor Services

Province by Province the Red Cross is opening its Free Blood Transfusion Service. Untold lives have been saved by this great organization. But more funds are needed to expand and maintain this humanitarian work.

Red Cross Aids Veterans

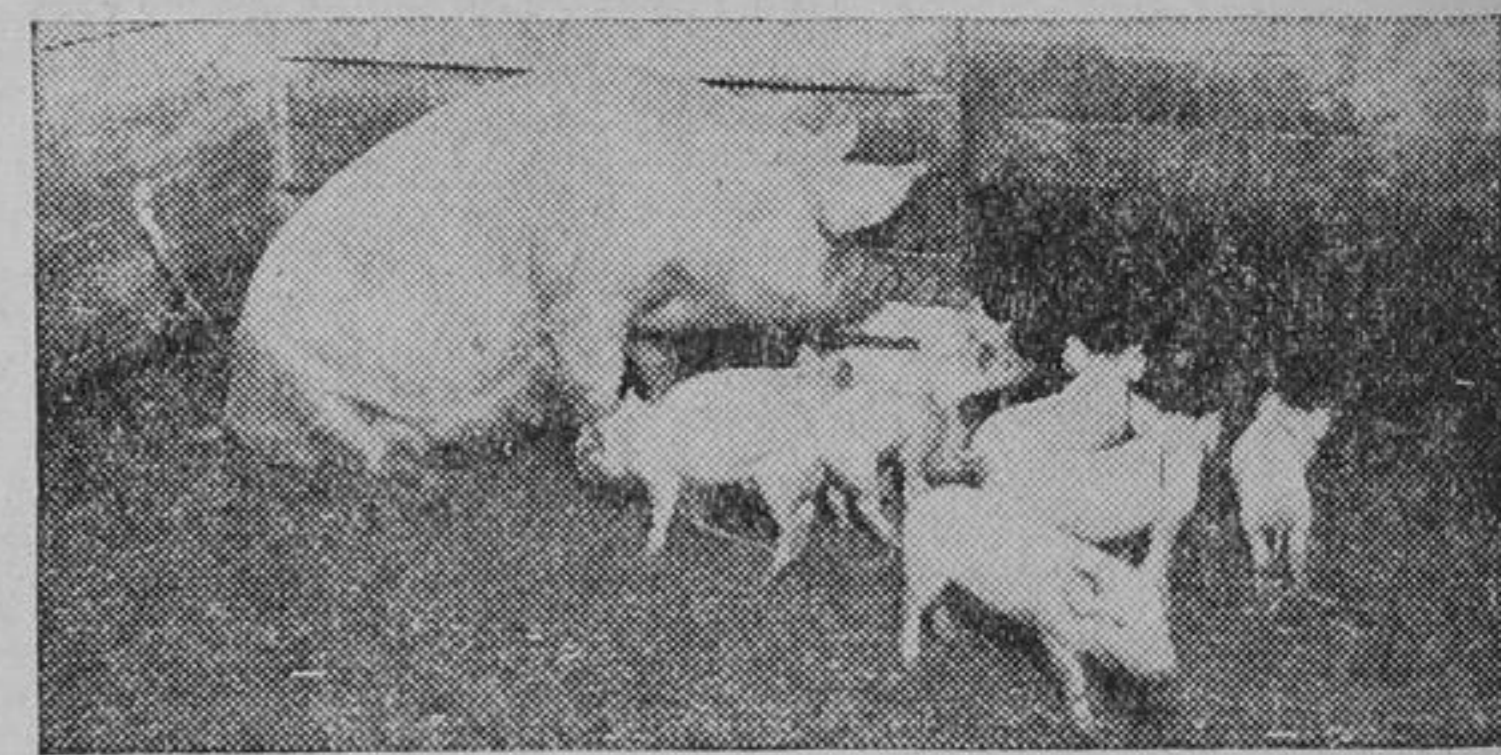

Red Cross provides many services for veterans in Hospitals. Other Red Cross activities include: Junior Red Cross; Swimming and Water Safety; Nutrition Services; First Aid and Home Nursing; Women's Work Activities etc.
