

New Dodge Promises Smoother, Safer Ride

Better vision through higher, wider windshields, and a smoother ride as a result of longer wheelbases and better insulation, are outstanding features of the new 118½ inch wheelbase Dodge DeLuxe and Special DeLuxe models. Seats are wider and there is more head and leg room, front and rear. "You can get in and out with your hat on" Dodge advertises. Four-Door Sedans and Club Coupes (as shown above) are available in both the DeLuxe and Special DeLuxe series in a choice of eight distinctive body colours.

A BOOK WITHOUT FOOTNOTES

One who himself had suffered much wrote: "Each man does at least a bit of reading in the book of suffering—a book that has no preface to explain its drift, no footnotes to throw a light upon its misty passages; a book that is published year by year in the great printing press of human experience."

Only those who have ever tried to read an old classic, written perhaps centuries ago, will understand the aptness of that reference. The general trend of the book might be followed but, without explanatory footnotes, a great deal is unintelligible. Much of the volume is sealed.

A few years ago I visited an old fisherman in his cabin on the west coast of Newfoundland. His life had been hard, with continual exposure to severe weather and to much danger. He had never known luxury and had always had difficulty in getting bare necessities. In the course of our conversation he quietly asked why "God does not do better." There was nothing irreverent in his remark, he was devout as he was sincere, but repeated hardships and seemingly futile labors made him wonder why such things should be.

He seemed almost ashamed of himself for even having voiced his difficulties. When I told him that men had been asking that same question for thousands of years—that many of the Psalms of the Bible uttered the same query—he was greatly astonished. But it is true, and whether it be a scholarly philosopher seeking to reconcile the seeming contradictions of life or a humble fisherman sadly pondering over his lot, men do face life with a question mark. In Green's Short History of the English People there is the story of how, in 627 A.D., the men of Northumbria—hardy, rude but valiant men of that far-off time—were being urged to accept the Christian faith which King Edwin had accepted. An aged man with a directness and simplicity we among them stepped forward and find touching after thirteen centuries said: "So seems the life of man, O King! It is a sparrow's flight when you are sitting at meat in winter-time, with the warm fire lighted on the hearth, but the icy rainstorm without. The sparrow flies in at one door, and tarries for a moment at the heat and light of the hearth fire, and then, flying forth from the other, vanishes into the wintry darkness from whence it came. So tarries for a moment the life of man in our sight; but what is before it, what is after it, we know not."

Jesus encouraged men to ask questions. Repeatedly we read such passages as, "They asked him again of this matter. And he saith unto them." That was chiefly how he taught them, by question and answer. In no way was his infinite patience and gentleness more fully revealed than when he dealt with troubled minds and anxious hearts. Jesus could be indignant with men—their hypocrisy, cruelty and worldliness, but with those who inquired, or ever doubted, he was tender and sympathetic.

Nicoemus doubted and because of his doubts we have one of the most illuminating of Christ's discourses. John the Baptist had strange misgivings and the knowledge of those brought no stern rebuke from Jesus; on the contrary he praised the Baptist with such eulogy as man never received before. When Thomas doubted and loudly voiced his position, Jesus showed him the wound-prints in his side and where the spear had pierced him.

Jesus did teach that there were some things that could not be revealed to his disciples because they could not at that time understand. "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth." Here he lays down a principle. Truth is revealed to men just as they are able to bear it.

There is a divine discretion which has its source in the infinite compassion of the Father's heart. Knowledge that would terrify and harm is withheld—for the present at least.

A veil 'twixt us and Thee, dread Lord,
A veil 'twixt us and Thee;
Lest we should hear too clear, too clear,
And unto madness see.

Our quotation to-day is by Jean Paul Richter: "How much I ought to forgive. We shall remain so short a time together."
