Here is a new door to Progress

KEEPING up with the times is the responsibility of every Canadian business. The latest addition to our cotton mill unit at Magog, Quebec, is an indication of Dominion Textile's appreciation of this fact. Designed on the latest structural plans for such plants, the building is air-conditioned throughout, equipped with fluorescent lighting and the most modern cotton textile machinery. It combines healthful, pleasant working conditions for the employees with a production efficiency which means more and better cotton goods for Canadian consumers at the lowest possible prices.

TEMPERANCEVILLE

Beginning next Sunday, May 15, Sunday School will be held in the morning at 10.30 D.S.T. All children of the community are invited to attend.

The regular monthly meeting of the W.A. and W.M.S. will be held Thursday afternoon, May 19, at the home of Mrs. Rumble. The topic will be Christian Fellowship Within the Family Circle and the Roll Call is to be answered by Something My Mother Taught Me. The lunch committee will be Mrs. Hudson and Mrs. Dillane. All ladies are cordially invited to attend.

Temperanceville Church was beautifully adorned with spring flowers on Mother's Day May 8. In the afternoon Mrs. Wilkin spoke to the Sunday School. Explaining the origin of Mother's Day and telling a beautiful story which illustrated how children may best honor their mothers. Mrs. Wilkin's was accompanied by her daughter Mrs. Rooney from Atikokan.

The theme of Mother's Day was continued in the evening service when the pastor Rev. E. C. Moddle spoke most fittingly to a good congregation of parents and children. God's greatest gift a mother, may in her turn bestow upon her children the priceless gift of an adequate knowledge of the Bible.

A most enjoyable feature of this service was the singing by the Junior Choir under the capable leadership of Mrs. McClure. Selections by the choir, the trios and solo by Miss Donna Jennings were very well rendered and much credit is due Mrs. McClure for her excellent training and untiring efforts.

During the social hour which followed, Misses Margaret McClure and Rosemary Wright sang beautiful solos. We wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. Palmer for so generously sharing their flowers and to the others who also contributed.

The manager of the telephone exchange was aroused from his slumber by the ringing of the telephone.

"Are you the manager of the telephone exchange?" asked a voice.

"Yes," answered the manager, "What can I do for you?"

"Tell me how it feels to get out of bed at two o'clock in the morning to answer a wrong number."

WHAT IS IMPORTANT?

If we were to ask any number of people what was important the answers would vary a great deal. No two people think quite the same about anything. One day before the second World War, two persons arrived at a railway station in Berlin, Germany. One was the world's champion prize-fighter, Jack Dempsey, and a huge crowd that overflowed the station into nearby streets wanted to see him. The other was a shy little lady, Madam Curie, who probably had done more than any other person to help fight the dread disease of cancer. But few took any notice of her — the prize fighter was a much bigger attraction.

It is interesting to watch people as they open the morning paper. Young people turn quickly to the sports pages; older men read about current affairs, perhaps an editorial or stock market news. Those over fifty seldom lay the paper down without looking over the obituaries, to see who is dead. Those are not hard and fast rules; they overlap a good deal but they are true to the general pattern.

It is certain that news which seems mighty important to one man appears trivial to another. They differ totally about what is important. John Wesley once stayed with a wealthy man in his manor home in the English midlands. An east wind was blowing and some smoke came down the chimney into the living room. The owner turned to Wesley and said: "I am a martyr to that smoke; every time an east wind blows I have to endure that smoke." Wesley had a keen sense of humour and in his daily journal wrote: "How some people exaggerate trivial affairs."

That is our chief trouble. We often see things out of proportion. During the last great financial depression, suicides on this continent increased enormously. Thousands of people whose financial assets sank or vanished completely, felt that life was no longer worth living and put an end to it. That would be amusing if it were not so tragic. Jesus asked: What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? But here was a vast number of people whose sense of values was such that, when their money had gone, felt there was nothing else to live for.

The apostle Paul had a companion named Demas, who lost the sense of his high calling and turned back. Paul wrote: "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." There is a world of meaning packed into that sentence. Demas lost the sense of what is important. Dr. Hugh Black in commenting on this says: "The seduction of the world is that it is here — present — to be had now. It presses on the mind; it presses on the senses. It is not something to be waited for or dreamed about. The world allures because what it gives, it gives now."

A five cent piece, if pressed against the eye, can shut out the sun. Yet millions or even billions, of five cent pieces could not equal the sun but when it is present it can prevent it being seen. So much for nearness. If public worship did nothing for us than give us a sense of proportion; it would be well worth while. It is so easy to over-emphasize the significance of cheap and transient things. Attendance at church can be an anchor to us; to steady and support us when we need it. That is the value of spiritual worship. It weans us away from that which is shallow and superficial.

Much that once seemed important no longer appears so. Paul wrote to the Corinthian Church: "When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man I put away childish things."

The Apostle gave up certain things; not so much that they were evil but because they appeared childish and he had outgrown them. Time taught him the relative value of different interests; enabled him to know what was important.

Our quotation to-day is a saying of Jesus: "He that loveth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

if every man were his own bank...

SUPPOSE you had to cart cash around to pay your bills. Pretty risky business. Hard on shoe leather, too.

You don't do it that way, of course. Like everybody else with a bank account — there are seven million of them — you simply get out your pen, write cheques and leave all the bookkeeping to your bank. That's the modern way... easy, simple, safe.

Handling and recording your chequing transactions is an important job. Your bank must do it right — or a competing bank will. You'll see to that!

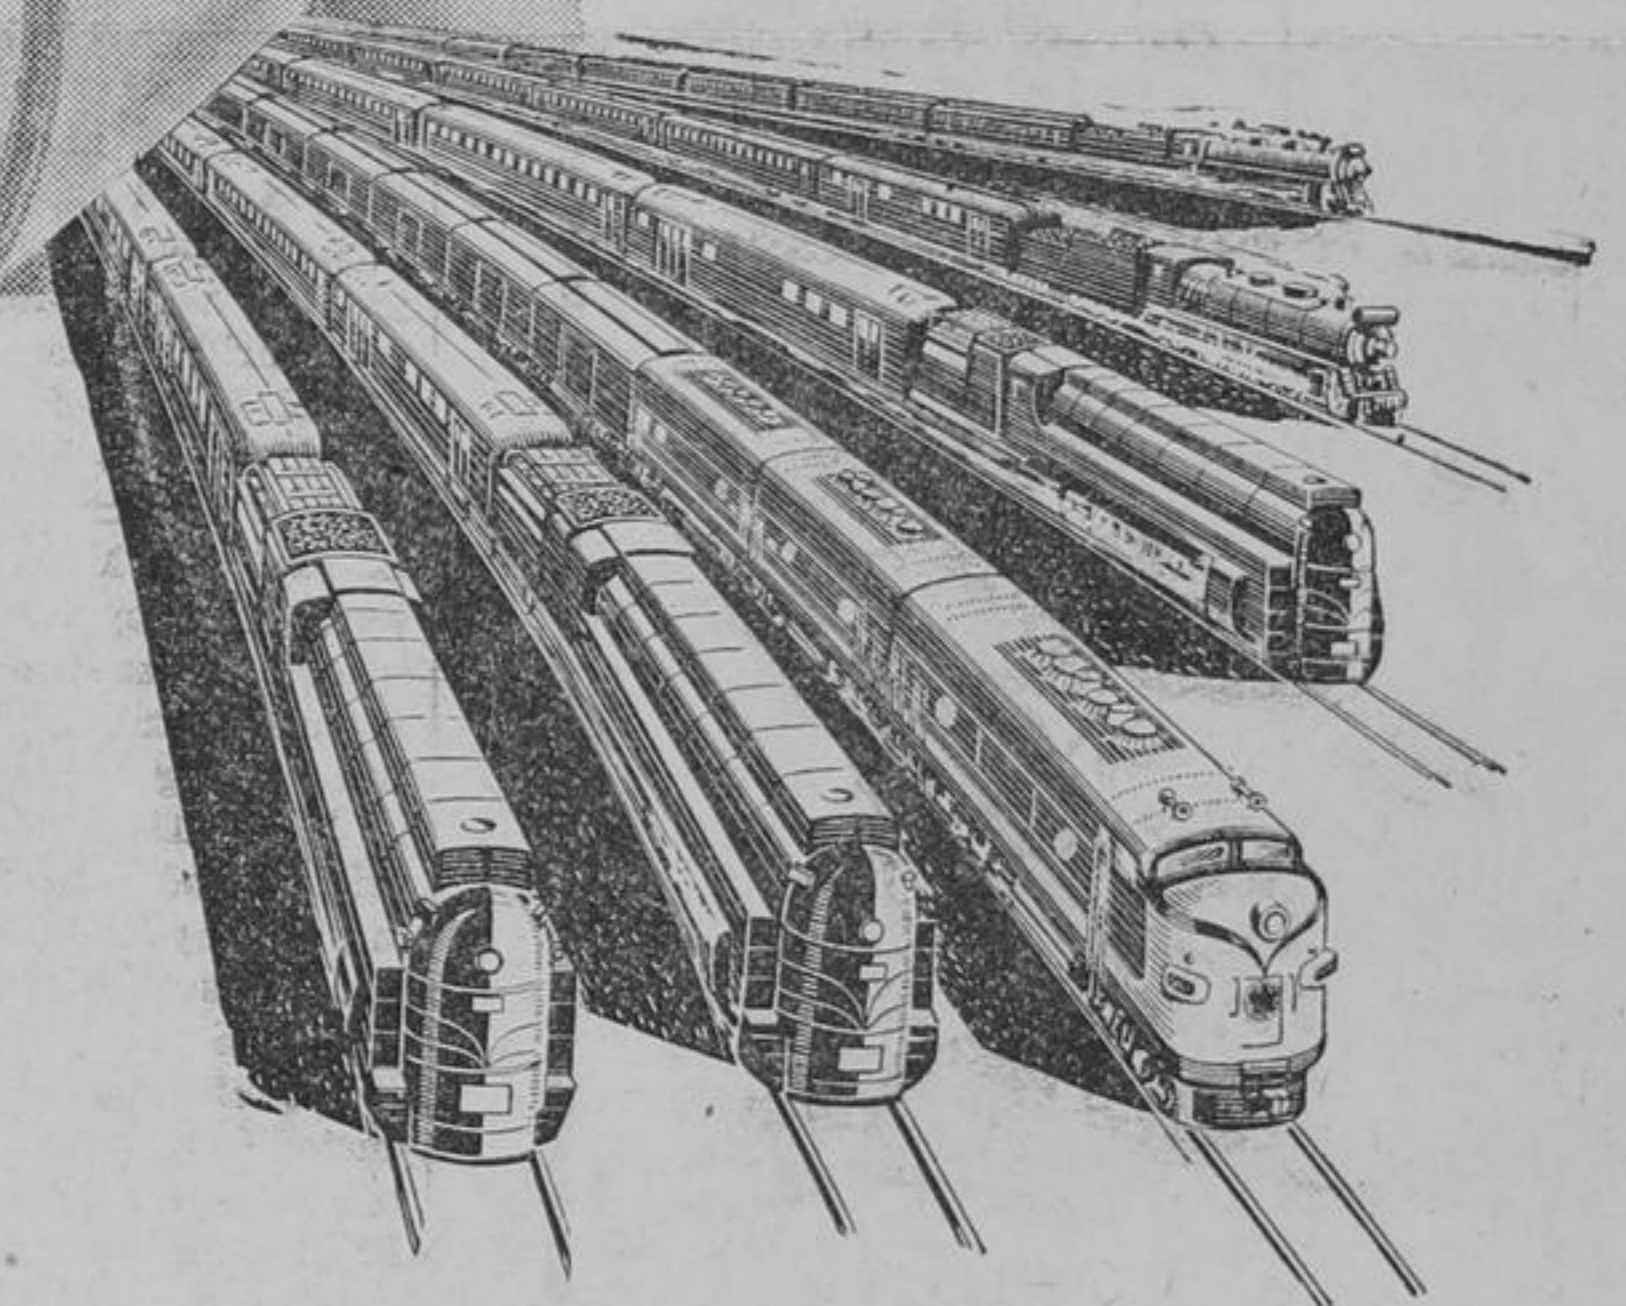

Suppose there were no competition... Could you expect the same efficiency, courtesy, eagerness to earn your goodwill?
