Guild Gossip

By Glad McLatchy
 It was quite a bid that the Evening Guild made last Tuesday evening, and no less significant was the lead the happy throng of guests responded with, for all hearts were trump which helped the Guild to fulfil its contract at the successful Social.
 Co-incidence entered into the swing of things too by hanging over the head of Tom T for the second time at the Guild functions, and being such a good sport he made the incident fun for everyone and gladdened the heart of the Refreshment Committee by the distribution of his well-bought prize.
 It was quite a night from many angles and another enjoyable party is in store for Guild members on December 13, but don't let the date scare you, for 'tis Xmas time and the time to be gay so come along with a present for someone and get into the spirit of Yuletide.

DEAR MR. EDITOR:

The Citizens of Richmond Hill have again responded splendidly to the Red Shield appeal of The Salvation Army in recent days.
 The Richmond Hill Lion's Club gladly took on the task of canvassing for this Campaign and we are certainly indebted to this fine group of men for their practical assistance.
 We trust there will come to contributors and workers alike a sense of real satisfaction in the fact that they have helped us in such a practical way with our work for others.
 May God bless one and all. Very sincerely yours, (Morgan Flannigan) Major Public Relations Representative

SUITS AND COATS ARE "BLOUSED"

Blousing is one of the most popular methods of breaking the line in the new 1950 fashions, although it is interpreted in many different ways, both on coats and suits. In the Doretta collection shown recently in London, the effect was that of a panel from shoulder to skirt-hem, with a single button apparently fastening it on the right-hand shoulder. This fullness is usually pouched softly at the waist-line above a narrow three-quarter or half-belt, and occasionally emphasized by gathers below a straight cut yoke. Classically tailored coats sometimes give a hint of blousing through a series of open darts above the waist-line. In the fitted coat group the classic type in worsted and fine, firm-handling materials are considered very important, since the recent swift fashion changes, says the "Fashion Trade Weekly," retail buyers report increasing demands from customers for "dateless" styles. Then there are the casual coats which have deep-cut armholes, and may be worn loose or held with a tie belt. Swaggers are still in evidence, although fullness is pruned down, but there is a continued feeling for centre back swing rather than the side or boxy coats — and also short boyish jackets, are worn over slim suits or skirts. Odd jackets in straight boxy lines are a popular buy for the spring, usually in attractive pastel shades which are deeper than those chosen for dresses.

"A Slow Boat To China" is alright in some ways — but for fast buying and selling try a Liberal Classified Ad. Telephone Richmond Hill 9.
