growing Doncaster district. He mentioned roads, water supply and school problems as matters to be dealt with and said that he felt that the association should co-operate with the township council in seeing these were attended to.
Following Mr. McAlpine's address the gathering formally decided on the formation of an organization to be known as the Doncaster Ratepayers' Association. Besides Mr. McAlpine the following officers were elected: C. Clifford, vice-president; E. Schilvers, secretary-treasurer; W. Chalmers, J. H. Knott, J. V. Peacock, C. G. Russell, directors.

Dental Survey Described To Lions At Maple
Five new members were inducted into Maple Lions Club on January 26 when Lion President Ray Bigford, assisted by Lions William Noble, Wesley Dew and Albert Rutherford, instructed them on their duties and responsibilities. Those joining were Rev. John Lambert, Gordon Neill, Neal Wilson, Dougald McCowan and Bruce McClelland. Each was presented with his pin by his sponsor.
Lion Dr. Phil McFarland gave a report on the dental survey of the schools at Hope, Maple and Vellore. Out of 130 pupils examined, he said, Vellore had the highest percentage of perfect teeth. He paid tribute to the previous survey, pointing out that it had led to much improvement. He felt that the greatest advantage gained from the survey was the fact that parents were notified in writing of the state of their children's teeth and so were able to take proper action in time.
Mentioned at the meeting was the dance, with Jack Fowler's orchestra, to be held in Maple Concert Hall on January 16.

Thornhill Reconstruction
dicative of the speed with which business got into gear again is the fact that Mr. Harley gave his wholesale houses an order at 10.30 last Friday morning and by 4.30 in the afternoon stock was being delivered and put on the shelves which had been hurriedly erected. Fortunately, says Mr. Harley, he saved his prescription file and consequently is able to look after old customers without delay.
Petrolane Carries On
In a little two-by-four office on the west side of Yonge Street the Petrolane Corporation, distributors of bottled gas and equipment, is going ahead full speed. Managing Director E. W. Sanderson is busy making plans to hasten the new building planned for erection in Richmond Hill, and which is described elsewhere in this issue. "Certainly we are carrying on here," he told The Liberal, as he mapped out an advertising campaign designed to show the safety of Petrolane. In spite of erroneous reports which appeared in Toronto papers, said Mr. Sanderson, there were no explosions. He evidenced the safety of his product by exhibiting cylinders which had come through the inferno and which were as solid as they were before the fiery test.
Still Clipping
Although his was another of the stores completely wiped out Thornhill village's barber T. Findlay, is carrying on. Hastily gathered equipment is being used in his home on Centre Street, where his old customers are rallying around. It's a pretty safe bet that the conversation traditional to a barber shop is 99% on one subject these days.
Nothing could be learned of the plans of Nelson Grinnell, who recently bought the old hotel. Since returning to Thornhill briefly after the fire he had not been seen around the village, enquiries disclosed.
A rather unusual angle of the fire was revealed by Mr. E. W. Anstey. Since the blaze, he said, he had received a number of offers for his land which, apparently, was worth more with the buildings off than it was with them intact. "I was surprised at some of the attractive prices offered me," he said. "I decided that if it was worth that much to somebody else it was worth it to me," he added.
He ascribed some of the high prices offered to the possible amalgamation of North York to Toronto and desire of business men and citizens to be outside the metropolitan limits. "Then, too, well located land for business purposes is becoming very hard to get in this neighbourhood," he said.
Narrow Escape
With their building severely scorched on the outside and at points many feet away from the actual conflagration, Mr. and Mrs. Vern Griffin are busy wondering how it is that the Leader Store escaped the fate of its neighbours. While repairs to the building will cost a fair amount less than $5 worth of stock was damaged, says Mr. Griffin.
While each of the Thornhill business men who suffered heavy losses in the fire is hard at work planning for the future, they are all ready to take time out for one thing. That is to express their gratitude for the ready and willing help given to them by everybody, both during the fire and also during the reconstruction period.
