Maple Community and School Club
"The veterinary in public health" was the subject of Dr. C. R. Reeds when he spoke to the Maple Community and School Club on Wednesday, February 5. The growing importance of the veterinary's profession was stressed by Dr. Reeds who showed how great a part the health and welfare of the domestic animal plays in our health. The academic course in veterinary medicine has grown from one to five years in approximately fifty years. The veterinarian has progressed from the old time horse doctor with only his primitive medicines and his love of animals to the modern practitioner with the best in science at his hand.

"Miracle drugs" play a large part in placing difficult and sometimes incurable diseases on the easily treated list, he said.

The annual meeting of the Club will be held in the school on Wednesday, March 5. Election of officers will be held and committee reports given.
