My Trip To New York
By David Hogg

(History in the making was seen a week ago by a group of boys from North York school districts, under a scheme originated by the North York and District Headmasters' Association last fall, by which eleven outstanding students were taken to New York to see the United Nations in operation and, as a sidelight, to get a first-hand view of the continent's greatest city.

Among those boys was David Hogg of Richmond Hill, son of the late Professor Frank Hogg and Mrs. Hogg. A student in Grade 12 in Richmond Hill High School, he has written his impressions of the tour. His story follows. ED. I.TOR).

On the afternoon of February 7, a group of eleven boys from high schools of this district left Malton by Trans-Canada Air Lines North Star. We were starting a trip to New York, under the guidance of Mr. Newell, principal of Markham High School. The expenses of the trip were paid by various organizations and mine were paid by the Lions Clubs of this district.

The flight to New York was uneventful, but the weather when the plane arrived was poor, and so our first glimpse of the city was disappointing. However we got aboard a bus, and soon arrived at our residence for the next four days, Sloane House Y.M.C.A.

That night we went on a guided tour of Rockefeller Center, the main broadcasting station for NBC network. There we were shown radio studios sound effect rooms, and all kinds of television equipment. Some of us were even televised!

From the great height of the Empire State Building, the next morning, we had our first real view of New York. In all directions lay this vast city, and famous landmarks, such as the Statue of Liberty could be easily seen.

Our first contact with the United Nations came in the afternoon, when we toured the new building on East River, in the heart of New York. This building is very long and tall, but for some reason is very thin. The land was donated by Rockefeller and the United Nations borrowed sixty-five million dollars from the United States to construct it. There are tremendous areas of glass on the office walls.

One of the high points of our trip was our visit to Radio City Music Hall. There we saw wonderful dancing displayed by a group working for the Music Hall itself and several other guest entertainers besides. The costumes and lighting effects were indescribable.

Friday was devoted to a trip to Lake Success, headquarters for the United Nations. Unfortunately, there was only one committee in

IN MEMORIAM

HALL — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Alfred Hall, who passed away on February 21, 1948.
