ATHLETES ARE MADE — NOT BORN

One of the most popular ways to explain the ability of any really great sports star is to call him "a born athlete". Maurice Richard is described as "a born goal scorer". Ted Williams is "a natural hit'er."

Yet, ten to one if you examine the background of the great ones carefully, you will find something that has made him the way he is. Richard spent hour after hour practising quick acceleration; now, when he sees an opening he can leave his check behind with a few quick strides. Williams boosted mediocre batting averages of his early career by spending weeks and months with a special hitting tee, and he still takes more time at batting practice than almost any other major leaguer.

In tennis, you can find the same situation. The name of "Big Bill" Tilden is at the top of the list when the all-time greats are mentioned. It seems hard to believe that Tilden couldn't make the "Varsity" team at University because his coach told him he didn't have enough strokes. Furthermore, the coach doubted whether Tilden had enough natural ability ever to become a tennis player!

Although discouraged, Tilden set out to prove him wrong. He found an abandoned warehouse near his home, drew a line along one wall at net height, and began a system of practice that lasted for months.

Tilden began to compete against himself, making sure that he brought into play every shot in his repertoire — backhands, forehands, lobs, chops, top spin drives, over-heads, even volleys from close in. His opponent won a point when he made an error; when he returned the ball 10 times to a given spot, Tilden won a point.

One hundred pairs of worn out running shoes later, Tilden decided he was ready for live competition. From the start he met with success. It wasn't long until "Big Bill" was known far and wide as a tennis player with a wonderful variety of strokes.

There is a lesson in the Tilden story for every athlete. A tremendous number of so-called "born" champions have developed their skill by some unusual and effective form of practice early in their career.

For tennis players, the wall drill used by Tilden can help develop shots and control. But remember, it takes something else all the great ones have had — the ability to spend long hard hours practising the fundamentals.

Tennis Club Plays First Tournament

Richmond Hill Tennis Club played its first tournament in the North York League Wednesday night, July 18, against Newmarket with the visitors winning six out of eight games.

The girls playing for Richmond Hill were Eleanor Smith, Joyce Wilde Alverna Smith and Judy Uren. Tim Saul, Harry Hill, Keith Teetzel and Dave Graham were the four boys who participated. Ladies' doubles, men's doubles and mixed doubles sets were played.

The schedule for forthcoming games to be played, with Richmond Hill, Aurora, Newmarket taking part, is listed below. Up to the present time Richmond Hill has played two tournaments, Newmarket one and Aurora one.

August 1: Newmarket vs. Aurora, to be played at Newmarket; August 8: Newmarket vs. Richmond Hill, to be played at Newmarket; August 15: Aurora vs. Richmond Hill, to be played at Aurora.

A local Junior singles tournament begins as soon as arrangements can be made, the winners of the three clubs in the North York League to compete against one another on August 9. Winners of this tournament will proceed to the Ontario finals in Toronto being run off August 18-24. The age limit for juniors is 18 and under so all members of the Richmond Hill club who would like to enter, contact the executive immediately.

This coming Monday, July 30, Keith Davis of the Newmarket Club, will be at Richmond Hill courts at 7 p.m. to instruct members free of charge.

Alexander Fined $15 For Roughing Ref.

Farmer Norm Alexander, rugged Richvale grappler, defeated Cleve Burton in the main bout last Friday night at the arena, but lost out financially as Referee Ronnie Leonard tacked a $15.00 fine on him for roughing the ref. Cleve seemed to be strong in the early stages of the match but after dropping Farmer for the first fall failed to stand up to the rugged Richvale boy and lost the last fall in 10 minutes.

The semi-final was a hectic affair and during the second fall, the Police Constable had to jump into the ring to restore order. "Battling" Bill Clubine succumbed to the rapid battering attack of "Mangler" Ed Mangotich and dropped the odd gall in 3 to lose out to the Slav. Many fans are of the opinion that Clubine could whip Mangotich if they were to change the referee; certainly Referee DeGans didn't give Clubine a hometown "break."

Baron Von Sieber, "The German Oak", and strong Bob Jordan wrestled 30 minutes to a draw in one of the most scientific matches to be seen in some time. These boys were pretty to watch, both strong and in good shape; they flashed about the ring like a pair of light-weights with first one and then the other having the advantage.

John "Hot Rod" Parisi and "Banty Rooster" Jim Bradley, wrestled to a 20 minute draw in the opener, with Parisi crowding at all times and only an error on the timekeeper's part saved "Rooster" from defeat.
