Union Strength Grows

Honourable Milton F. Gregg, Minister of Labour, revealed this week that there had been an increase of more than 22,000 trade union members during the year 1950. The fortieth annual survey of labour organization in Canada carried out by his Department showed that as of January 1, 1951, total union membership was 1,029,000 or approximately 2 per cent above the figure for a year earlier.

This rise continued the upward trend in the membership figures since 1939. Membership figures to the nearest thousand for the years 1939 to 1951 are as follows:

1939 - 359,000	1945 - 711,000
1940 - 362,000	1946 - 832,000
1941 - 462,000	1947 - 912,000
1942 - 578,000	1948 - 978,000
1943 - 665,000	1949 - 1,006,000
1944 - 724,000	*1951 - 1,029,000

*Figures for 1949 and the years previous are as of December 31. Figures for 1951 are as of January 1, 1951.

New Industry

Canadian manufacturers in deciding on the location of a new plant have many problems to consider. In order to help them arrive at a decision many municipalities offer the services of an industrial committee composed of members from the local council.

Naturally the first duty of any such committee is to draw attention to the advantages offered by their own particular area, and in persuading manufacturers that it is a good place to establish a new plant. How persuasive they have been will reflect in the ever growing prosperity of the community.

For any locality the introduction of a new industry is a very important and necessary acquisition. One of the main sources of income for any municipality is from its industries. Plants also offer job opportunities to the local residents and a chance for steady employment. For every person on their plant payroll, several other people — merchants, teachers and so on are supported in turn.

In order to fully understand what a new plant means to a community one needs only to consider a report made by the Industrial Bureau of an American municipality. As a result of their research the bureau estimated that a new industry employing 150 men requires and supports an average of 393 occupied homes; 33 retail stores; half million dollars in retail sales, 6,600 acres of additional farm produce; 24 additional professional men, 22 school rooms and 18 teachers, 320 cars (and services for them), 2½ million dollars in additional taxable valuation.

The Department of Labour is preparing its fortieth annual report of Labour organization in Canada, which will include further details about unions, their memberships, officers, affiliation and organization.

It would do us all well to bear these figures in mind.

Best Best Seller

A new version of the Bible is about to be printed and the announcement that the first printing will be 1,000,000 volumes reminds us that the Book is still the world's best seller. No book-of-the-month club has been needed to drum up subscribers. As fast as Bibles are printed people come forward to buy them.

The new printing will be the Revised Standard Version. It will attempt to combine the beauty of the King James Version with the accuracy of the American Standard Version of 1901. There will be the usual argument as to whether the translators have achieved their design. The new work, for example, revises "fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat; and no man gave him anything.

Is "pods" better than "husks" here? Is "no one gave him anything" as beautiful as "no man gave unto him"? We think not; but perhaps another generation, brought up on the phrases of the new version, will not cling so tenaciously to the old as we tend to do, and will see beauty in the familiar, as we do now.

No one ever settles these arguments about new translations of the Bible. It is not important that anyone should. What is important, and it is demonstrated for us every year as figures are published showing its distribution, that the Bible is indestructible. It is the best best seller of all time.
