Buttons Back In Fashion News

This year buttons are once again back in the fashion news, but from the prehistoric bone pin to the present day plastic, buttons have always had an interesting story. For thousands of years, plain thorn, bone, wood and ivory pins were used to fasten clothes together. It wasn't until 6,000 B.C. that man discovered metal, and some fashion conscious woman discovered that pins could be worn for decoration as well as for more practical reasons. Brooches and pins some with rare and costly jewel settings, remained the only clothes fasteners until the Middle Ages. (The phrase "Pin Money" originated because husbands gave their wives an allowance to purchase this luxury item).

Finally, sometime in the 14th Century, a German goldsmith discovered that cloth, jewels and other materials could be mounted on buttons, and we have them till this day.

One button custom that has endured through the years is that of putting buttons on men's sleeves. It is said that Frederick the Great originated this when he had buttons sewn on his soldiers' jackets to cure their distressing habit of using their sleeves as handkerchiefs.

Another interesting custom used in the past, was that of giving buttons as gifts. Henry the Eighth's betrothal present to the ill-fated Anne of Cleves was a set of "great buttons of diamonds, rubies and Oriental pearls". And at the court of Louis the Fourteenth, buttons set with priceless gems were high fashion.

Buttons seem to be more popular than ever this year. According to Singer sewing centre experts, women who sew are choosing a wide variety of buttons for trimming, because buttons are still one of the easiest ways of adding a distinctive and decorative touch to a home-sewn garment. And the latest word from Paris is that designers are using buttons on everything: hats, shoes and gloves as well as on dresses, and suits.

"Do Not Pick the Flowers" is a common sign in Canada's parks. But in Ireland they read more subtly, "Let it be said of these flowers that they died with their roots on."
