HIGH BRIGHT BUGGY WHEELS

By Luella Creighton It is a fair guess that every Canadian has heard of the Mennonites and that few but their nearest neighbors know much about them.

These thrifty and prosperous Puritans, with their plain black clothes and rich farmsteads, had been settled in the country for generations without losing the narrow, intense world their faith had laid down for them.

Carefully but vividly Mrs. Creighton builds up her picture of the neat, scrubbed farmhouses and the work-worn women in them who envisage nothing beyond a lifetime of steady toil and utter subsjection to their husbands — nothing, that is, except the vision of the life to come so compellingly paced before them at religious services which still retained a white hot religious fervor.

Illie is the daughter of one of the richest Mennonite farmers and as the intended wife of a Mennonite preacher the lines of her life seem firmly laid down. But the trot of a high-stepping mare with an ambitious young man at the reins sets her thoughts flying in other directions.

Illie is by no means a frivolous girl, but her very sincerity drives her further and further from her people, as her knowledge of the outside world expands. She has talents and tastes that the narrow home life cannot satisfy nor can she give lip service to a creed once her inner certainty has vanished.

Illie's relationship with her father, who alone among her people tries to understand her, is very beautifully portrayed. While the other characters seem rather type than individuals, these two emerge as truly living human beings and their struggle for understanding makes a very moving story.

Obituary ROBERT DUNDAS McLEOD The death occurred on Sunday, September 23, at the Western Hospital, Toronto, of Robert Dundas McLeod of King City. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from Thompson's parlours in Aurora, and interment was made in King City cemetery. Rev. D. C. H. Michell, rector All Saints Anglican Church where Mr. McLeod was a member took charge of the funeral service.

The late Mr. McLeod was born 74 years ago in Parkhill, Ont. He was a builder by trade and built many of the homes in the St. Clair Ave. district of Toronto, when the Deer Park section was being opened. Later he was a salesman for the Canadian Crushed Stone Co. For over 30 years Mr. McLeod and his family were residents of Centre Island where he took great interest in the athletic activities of the islanders. He came to King as a week-end resident in 1942, and moved there permanently in 1948. Since his wife, the former Emma King of Georgetown, predeceased him two years ago, Mr. McLeod had made his home with his eldest son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Bob McLeod. During three years of his life he had been bed-ridden, and two weeks ago he fell and broke his hip. He is survived by three children, Robert of King, Bruce of Kitchener and Jean of Toronto.
