Weddings

LOVEROCK-BAKER
Decorated with ferns and baskets of gladioli and larkspur, Westminster Presbyterian Church, Willowdale, was the scene of one of the prettiest September weddings on Saturday afternoon when Ruth Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Baker, Doncaster, became the bride of Arthur Loverock, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Loverock of Langstaff. Rev. W. N. Ferguson performed the ceremony, throughout which the organist, Mr. George Lloyd played softly.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a floor length gown of white bridal satin with drop shoulder line and white nylon net yoke shirred and edged with lace. Her sleeves came to a point over her hands and her fingertip veil was caught to a half hat of matching satin trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and pink gladioli tied with satin ribbon. Mrs. E. Rayson, sister of the bride, was the matron of honour. She wore a gown of mauve printed organza over taffeta, with matching half hat; she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of bronze nudes and cream roses tied with mauve streamers.

Little Charleen Rayson, niece of the bride was flower-girl. She was dressed in yellow organza over taffeta with yellow ribbon in her hair and carried a nosegay of yellow and mauve 'mums and pink roses, with yellow streamers. The groomsmen were Mr. W. O'Leary of Toronto.

At the reception which was held at Bettles in Richmond Hill the bride's mother received in a gray suit with mauve accessories and corsage of pink roses and carnations. She was assisted by the groom's mother in navy blue printed silk with navy blue accessories and corsage of yellow tea roses and bronze 'mums.

For going away the bride donned a fawn pick-and-pick suit with brown accessories. Her corsage was a mauve orchid. The happy couple left for a motor trip through Quebec and on their return will reside in Doncaster.

VANWIERGEN-VLASHLOW
On Saturday, September 29, at Richmond Hill United Church at 3 p.m. in the presence of about twenty relatives and friends, the marriage was solemnized of Jacob VanWiergen and Anna Willems, formerly of Holland.

The Rev. J. O. Totton officiated. The groom was supported by Joseph D. Fleming, and the bridesmaid was Miss Corry Lubberda, both of Richmond Hill.

About Books

POPE AND HIS CRITICS

By W. L. MacDonald

For a century and a half, Alexander Pope was a live issue among the literary critics. English letters has no period comparable to it. Duging Pope's lifetime and for a long time after, he was vilified and abused, glorified and idolized, but almost never was his poetry analyzed and appraised on the basis intruded.

Pope was a good deal to blame, but then many of his critics were little men. And the times were unique. It was the Augustan age — anything but noble, really, although the classical was a cult — when the writing men were a little world of their own. "The vast multitude was blissfully unaware of the witty, moralizing, fawning, and generally quarrelling race of writers who are now looked upon as the real Augustans."

When Pope pilloried Critic John Dennis, Dennis answered that the poet was a "hunch-backed toad." Pope's friends probably frowned and his enemies probably grinned in glee but, the times being what they were, neither side was surprised by the name-calling.

Pope died in 1744, and Professor MacDonald finds it convenient to include in the contemporary criticism what was written up to the time of the publication of Pope's complete works in 1751 by his "official" editor, Warburton.

In Part II, 1751-69, the author includes the first volume of Joseph Warton's Essay on the Genius and Writings of Pope, and ends the period with the critical Life of Pope, written by Ruffhead under the supervision of Warburton. A little over a decade later, Johnson's Life of Pope appeared, "a landmark in the criticism and biography of the poet."

Warton plays the leading role in the last stage, 1782-97, with the second volume of his Essay on Pope, and his edition of the poet's complete Works three years before the end of the century. Contributions by various lesser critics are discussed.

Important in the development of the book are the three early sub-chapters. Taste, Criticism, Personalities. They provide a background for some of the rough-and-tumble that is to follow.

Nearly all the literary people of Pope's time figure in this review because they all had something to say about the great poet, from Addison, "a timorous foe and suspicious friend," to Swift, who said, "In Pope I cannot read a line But with a sigh I wish it mine."

The student of Pope will find no more exciting chapter in the book than the one on the Dunciad. MacDonald says, "In the whole range of literary criticism no other great poem perhaps has ever been attended with so few critical and so many personal remarks."

Only the student, perhaps, will be deeply concerned with an examination of the evidence as to whether the poem is a personal attack on Pope's literary fellows or whether, as some critics have claimed, it is a general satire aimed at the reformation of manners. Professor MacDonald, who has done a noteworthy job of scholarship notes that "The Rape of the Lock" has, through the years, provoked almost unanimous critical approval.

TIME OUT FOR YOUTH
By Arthur S. Gregor
Today's teenagers face problems that cannot be solved by any one set of answers. These differ radically from both those that faced their parents, the youth of the '20's and the parent-children problems which cropped up at the turn of the century. The youth of today possibly requires more guidance and understanding than has any other generation.

"Time Out For Youth" is an attempt to formulate rules of behaviour for the average teenager. Its author, Arthur Gregor, has concentrated more on rules of common-sense, rather than on any too-rigid code of etiquette. He discusses many of the questions which plague the teen-ager: whether or not to "go steady," the managing of allowances, should the high-school youth choose a part-time job, how to get the most out of education and extra-curricular activities, promoting and keeping the confidence of one's parents. It discusses ways in which the adolescent can best get along with his contemporaries — the evaluation of his own personality and using it to his best advantage.

Although this book is written primarily for those young people who attend large public high schools based on the American system, it may prove useful to any teen-ager who is finding the 'teens a difficult period. This book would undoubtedly be more useful for reference had it been supplied with an alphabetical index.
