KNOW YOUR TOWNSHIP

More than doubling its production over the period of the last year, J. B. & D. Company near Unionville is a rapidly progressing enterprise. This, the second in a series of articles on industry in Markham Township, is about a business, which like the many others established in this area, is stressing the inroads industry is making into a farming community.

The most unique part about this company is its name. It hasn't just the ordinary run-of-the-mill kind that can be found in any telephone directory, it has an originality of its own. Instead of calling their company just C. R. Hildebrand & Sons they wanted to be different, so chose to be known as Jack, Bud and Dad — J. B. & D.

The beginning of J. B. & D. was in 1946 in Weston where the Hildebrands lived for twenty-five years. At that time Mr. Hildebrand was Ontario manager of Crown Diamond Paint Company, Toronto, and knowing only too well the shortage of paint brushes caused by the war decided to manufacture them himself. Finding the necessity for more space as the business progressed the Hildebrands decided to move "to the country," purchasing ten acres of land bordering number 7 highway just west of Unionville from Mr. Styles who had previously operated a chick hatchery on the premises. And this building, converted from a chick hatchery to a manufacturing plant, now witnesses paint rollers in the making. This is J. B. & D's main line of which 60,000 of these rollers covered with mohair and lamb's wool were produced this year. In the hardware line they also manufacture Christmas tree stands and shelf hangers which are the newest of their products.

Tractor moulder weed sprayers, 2-4-D weed killer, brush killers, greaseless bronze gear pumps and sprayer accessories are the farm lines produced. This part of the business has increased considerably with encouragement by the Department of Agriculture of scientific weed killing and spraying of lawns and trees.

Spring and summer is the peak time of year for J. B. & D. and when producing to capacity they employ about seven local people. The number varies with the amount of business ahead of them, and their products are sold all across Canada to hardware, drug and farm equipment dealers. J. B. & D. will have been in the community only two years this April, and like the industry reviewed last week is bringing a certain change in the economics of the township.
